Hogan Has 69 to Win Open Title By 4 Strokes

Mangrum, Penalized For Lifting Ball, 2d With 3-Over-Par 73; Fazio Scores 75

By Bus Ham
Post Sports Editor

Ardmore, Pa., June 11.—Ben Hogan, the great little comeback guy from Texas, came back to the National Open golf rulership today, but a technicality dulled what otherwise might have been a fighting finish to the last shot.

Hogan went around the tight 6694-yard Merion Golf Club course in 69, one under par, and beat out Lloyd Mangrum, the Menjou of golf, and George Fazio of the Woodmont Country Club, Washington, D. C., in a three-way playoff. They had tied yesterday at 287 over the regulation 72 holes.

Mangrum was officially scored a 73, figuring in the technicality that bemildered 7500 spectators.

Fazio was around in 75, faltering on the second nine, where he whipped up a subpar 32 and 33 Saturday.

The technicality that jaded the finish occurred on the sixteenth hole with Mangrum in hot pursuit of Hogan, trailing by only a stroke.

Trouble Follows Birdie

Mangrum had knocked in a 13-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the 395-yard fifteenth hole to cut Hogan's advantage from two strokes to one.

The sixteenth is 445 yards long with the green perched on top of a hill. Mangrum missed his tee shot, pushing it into the rough to the right.

All he could do with his third was chip it out into the fairway, barely ahead of the tee shots of Hogan and Fazio. Ben was on nicely in two. Mangrum's third stopped just short of Hogan's ball on the green.

As Mangrum addressed his ball to put, he saw an insect perched on top of it. Instinctively, Mangrum reached down, picked up the ball, blew the insect off.

Putting the ball back on the green, he knocked it straight into the hole. The gallery sent up the day's biggest shout, thinking Mangrum had made a par 4, still was within a shot of Hogan, who got down in two putts, with the tough seventeenth and eighteenth coming up.

But United States Golf Association officials put their heads together and ruled that Mangrum had committed a breach of the

4 Drowned, 4 Rescued as Cabin Cruiser Goes Over Dam and Is Trapped in Spillway

Seaplane tries in vain to drop rescue gear to four men clinging to wrecked boat

Pittsburgh, June 11 (AP).—Four persons died and four were rescued today after a night of horror aboard a cabin cruiser trapped in the spillway waters of an Allegheny River dam.

The battered survivors—all men—were rescued by a group of daring boatmen at dawn. Clinging desperately to the swirling boat, they had watched the others swept away one by one.

The boat had missed an 11-foot lock and had swept over the dam.

After futile rescue attempts by a blimp, a seaplane and numerous small boats, a crew of volunteers drove a 100-foot sternwheel river tug into the violent waters and saved them.

Several hours later the rescue boat—owned by the Consumers Mining Co.—overturned. It is being ground to bits in the turbulent waters.

Voiding of Land Gift to Poles Would Mean War, Reds Say

Berlin, June 11 (AP).—Taegliche Rundschau, official organ of the Soviet Control Commission, said today "any attempt to annul Poland's annexation of German territory would provoke a new war."

The paper coupled this warning with the claim that the Communist East German government "is the only legitimate representative of the German people."

A communique issued here and in Warsaw Wednesday said the East German and the Polish governments had agreed on the "permanent marking" of their new frontier on the Oder-Neisse River line.

American and British government spokesmen have said their countries do not recognize the Soviet Zone's authority to negotiate the border agreement. The position of the Western Powers all along has been that the final border line should be left to a German peace treaty.

At Fulda in the West German Republic, 50,000 Germans, expelled from territory now administered by Poland and Czechoslovakia, marched in protest against the Polish-East German agreement.

The parade and a speech-making rally passed without incident.

Taegliche Rundschau asserted the East German government, in agreeing to the loss of 38,986 square miles to Poland, recognized the Oder-Neisse border as "the final and enduring frontier of peace."

The paper said the United States would like to delay the acceptance of this frontier, "which

Nonscheduled Airlines Fight Proposed Curb

CAB Hearing Sought On Ruling Limiting Flights Per Month

New York, June 11 (NYHT).—Nonscheduled air carriers are raising a legal fund of $50,000 to fight a proposed amendment of the Civil Aeronautics Board economic regulations which would limit them to a total of three flights in the same direction during any four consecutive weeks, Edward W. Tabor, president of Trans-American Airways, said today.

The proposed amendment, published in the Federal Register of June 7, becomes effective 30 days from that date if not rescinded.

Tabor, whose airline runs about 15 round trips a month from New York to Los Angeles and San Francisco, said "the Civil Aeronautics Board is toying by the subterfuge of limiting us to a maximum of three trips a month to eliminate the nonscheduled carriers from the commercial aviation scene.

"When we entered into the irregular carrier business none of the major lines protested in the least. They waited instead until after we had attracted hundreds of thousands of people who would never have boarded an airplane had we not given them good service at reasonable rates. The scheduled airlines then put pressure on this Government agency to put us out of business."

He indicated the nonscheduled lines would ask for a CAB hearing on the proposed amendment this week. If the amendment is not rescinded on the basis of the hearing the lines will ask the President to reverse the ruling, Tabor added.

60 Police Raid Waseda U. in Tokyo Red Hunt

Tokyo, June 11 (AP).—Police today raided one of Tokyo's universities in their drive against Communist foes of the occupation.

Sixty police, armed with search warrants, entered Waseda University and seized copies of a Communist-inspired open letter to Gen. Douglas MacArthur. All special student meetings for the week were banned.

Vice Chairman Yuichi Eshima of the Students' Autonomy Society—similar to an American University's student council—said the action was "worse than the prewar peace preservation measures."

The open letter demanded a peace treaty for Japan that would include Russia and Communist China.

Jaffe to Face Amerasia Case Queries Today

Senate Unit May Get First Look at Papers Of Forrestal on Case

By The Associated Press

Senate investigators are ready to toss scores of questions today at one-time Amerasia editor Philip Jaffe, who pleaded guilty and was fined $2500 in the 1945 secret-documents case.

Jaffe, a native of Russia, is under subpena to go before a closed session of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee that is looking into the controversial Amerasia episode.

The case involves alleged theft of hundreds of confidential Government papers.

At today's session, the committee also may get its first look at personal papers of the late James V. Forrestal dealing with one aspect of the sensational case.

Intervention Confirmed

The Justice Department on Saturday confirmed that notes from Forrestal's diary show that he intervened just before the case broke to make sure that President Truman was fully aware of its international significance. Forrestal was Secretary of the Navy when the six arrests were made. He died last year.

Officials of the Senate inquiry committee said the Justice Department is planning to hand over pertinent parts of the Forrestal papers to the committee. The papers disclose that Forrestal was concerned lest the Amerasia case "greatly embarrass" this country's relations with Russia at the United Nations' Charter Conference in San Francisco. He wrote of asking officials to get all the facts to the President.

Forrestal's intervention apparently held up the arrests of Jaffe and five other persons—including three Government employes—about a week. They were taken into custody by the FBI after Mr. Truman ordered vigorous action in the case.

Johnson Asks Rejection of Funds Riders

Declares Job Cuts Would Hit Services' Functions, Bar AF 'Primary Missions'

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Department of Defense has advised Congress that passage of the Taber-Thomas and Jensen economy amendments would force a further reduction of 144,310 Army, Navy and Air Force civilian workers next year and "literally preclude" the accomplishment of the Air Force's "primary missions."

A report submitted to the Senate Appropriations Committee by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson spells out the effect of the two House-approved riders and urges that they be eliminated from the 1951 omnibus spending act.

The Jensen amendment, barring the filling of 9 out of 10 vacant Federal civilian jobs during the fiscal year beginning July 1, would have its most serious effect on the Air Force's overseas bases, the report indicates.

Installations Cited

Citing "such strategically important installations as Dhahran (Saudi Arabia), Tripoli, the Azores and Newfoundland" as prime examples, the report declared:

"Another effect of Section 114 (the Jensen amendment) will be the mandatory closing of overseas bases which cannot be maintained for any period of time because of the extremely high turnover rate in personnel . . . This is occasioned primarily by the high percentage of natives utilized and because a high percentage of the United States nationals employed overseas are dependents of military personnel on limited tours of duty in those areas.

"The result will be either an actual withdrawal from vital overseas military bases or a gradual descent to impotency."

Flying safety in the United States also would be hard hit by the provision, the USAF section of the report states.

"There is no doubt that in a few short months the reductions forced by Section 1114 will literally preclude the accomplishment of our primary missions," said the Air Force. "We cannot escape a drastic reduction in number of flying hours and in flying-safety standards."

Study at Tokyo

A "detailed on-the-ground" study was made at Tinker AF Base—a depot "with a consistent record of low personnel turnover"—to give an accurate picture of the effect of the Jensen job cut on aircraft and engine maintenance, it was revealed.

"The study conclusively shows," says the report, "that by the end of the month under the House bill it will be necessary to reduce both the number of aircraft in active service and the number of flying hours. The rate of reduction will be sharply increased with each passing month."

Secretary Johnson ordered the armed forces to make a detailed study of the effect of the two economy riders written into the 29-billion-dollar omnibus appropriation bill on the House floor last month. He forwarded the lengthy report to the Senate committee on June 1, and it was made available by that body in printed hearings just released.

It discloses that the Navy estimates it will have to further reduce its civilian force by 43,000 employes in fiscal 1951 if the Jensen amendment is approved. The Army, basing its estimate on turnover of employes in continental United States alone during the past year, figures it will lose 69,610 jobs. Higher overseas turn-

Milk Delivery Set Up For D. C. Institutions As City Faces Drought

Customers Storm Stores, Out-of-Town Dairies; Producers Exporting Output

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Greater Washington families yesterday rushed to stores and the few dairies unaffected by the milk workers' strike to buy up the fast dwindling supply. An almost complete drought loomed for today.

Anxious housewives began calling dairies, newspapers and the District Government yesterday as they watched their milk stocks run out and discovered the same thing was happening at the stores.

A small continuing trickle of milk was assured for the city as three independent dairies, which are not unionized, stepped up production to balloon across-the-counter sales.

Lines formed periodically at the 65 High's dairy stores as customers waited for stocks to be replenished. An all-day shuttle service was set up between the bottling plant and the stores to speed freshly bottled milk.

As Fast As It Was Processed

In nearby Maryland, the Golden Rule Dairy, New Hampshire ave. extended, at Hillandale, had a lineup of cars most of the day. "They took away milk as fast as we could process it," W. W. Mayes, owner, reported.

The dairy had the "biggest day" of its history, selling about 1600 quarts above a normal Sunday, Mayes said. About 5 p. m., the sales were shut off so Mayes would have enough to make deliveries to regular customers today.

The buyers were not only families, but also stores, particularly delicatessens, which sent trucks and purchased several hundred quarts at a time.

The Martin Dairy near Olney, Md., also had a super sales day. Many customers were "emotionally upset" about the milk strike and bought heavily, an employe said.

Six-and-Half Cent Deposit

Thirty miles away, at Manassas, the Birmingham Dairy sold four times its usual Sunday total and prepared to work its employes through the night to meet today's demands. Customers, many from northern Virginia, were paying the usual Washington price per quart, plus 6½ cents for the bottle.

The operator of the Boones Hill Delicatessen, 5144 Benning rd., Hillside, Md., brought in a load of milk from the Manassas dairy and offered it for sale for 33 cents a quart. He pointed out that he had to purchase ice—to guard against spoilage on the trip as well as pay the expenses of travel and driving time.

This alleviation of the Washington situation, however, is running into a new shortage—bottles. Dairy operators said that since they had no way of collecting the bottles

Keeps Costs High

Marketing Of Produce Antiquated

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The cost of fresh fruits and vegetables could be lowered as much as half in some of the larger cities, a marketing expert has told the House Agriculture Committee, by modernizing facilities of handling them.

Not only housewives but farmers also would benefit. Lower costs would increase consumption and boost demand for the products of truck gardens and orchards.

Some big city markets where perishables are handled haven't changed in 150 years, the committee was told. The estimates came in hearings last week before the House group on a bill by Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.) that would provide Government financing for new markets.

Local marketing costs have been given particular study recently because of the sharply increasing

Plan for Hospitals Nebulous as Strike Continues Through Its Second Day

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

District institutions and private hospitals were assured of a continuing milk supply last evening as the Washington area milk strike-lockout continued through its second day.

Still unsolved after more than five hours of discussion between drivers' union and dairy representatives was the problem of supplying milk to families with infants.

The main issue of the dispute, over working hours, which brought about the strike, also remained unsolved.

Federal mediator Henry G. Baker, who participated in the session which led to an "emergency" supply agreement, met with dairy and union representatives last night in an effort to solve the situation.

Shut Since Saturday Noon

All nine of the union dairies in the area have been shut down since Saturday noon. The union, AFL Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes Local 246, claimed it called the strike against only three of the dairies—Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Wakefield and Harvey, Dairy spokesmen insist the union struck all nine.

The "emergency" agreement of last evening provided that Richfield Dairy, one of the six accused of having "locked out" its employes, should process and deliver the 1100 gallons of milk required daily by District institutions.

The plan was to go into operation last night and first deliveries were to be made this morning. Union officials agreed Richfield Dairy could get bulk milk for the emergency distribution from any of the other dairies.

Details Being Worked Out

Details on supplying private hospitals, whose milk supplies generally was sufficient to last until this noon, were still being worked out last night.

Spokesmen for the dairies said they hoped to work out arrangements to provide home delivery to families requiring milk for infants, before going into strike issue negotiations.

The meeting which led to the "emergency" delivery agreements, conducted by the same negotiating teams which have been trying to settle the main dispute, followed a morning meeting yesterday called by District officials.

There, Commissioner Guy Mason and Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young, working through District Purchasing Officer Roland M. Brennan, had arranged a tentative emergency plan for supplying the 14 District institutions.

The principal institutions involved were Gallinger Hospital, which uses about 600 gallons of

Prober Finds D. C.-Florida Gambling Link

Kefauver Aide Tells Miami Audience of 'Layoff' Activities

By Don Petit
Miami Daily News Reporter

Miami, Fla., June 11.—Florida gamblers work closely with those of Washington, D. C., in "layoff money" gambling activities, Downey Rice, associate counsel for the Kefauver Senate Committee investigating interstate rackets, said here last night.

Rice was a guest on the weekly broadcast of the Crime Commission of Greater Miami, carried over 13 south Florida radio stations.

He said he was well prepared to trace operations of interstate gambling with his own City of Washington because of an investigation made in 1948 for a special grand jury probing charges of widespread police corruption.

"We ascertained that some of the Washington gamblers were in close touch with their associates in Florida during the winter season," the former FBI agent said. He did not name any gamblers.

"The amount of money handled in these interstate operations is unbelievable," he said. "George Morris Fay, United States district attorney in Washington, estimated the gambling take in the Washington area was over 100 million dollars a year. Personally, I think that is a very conservative estimate."

Rice declined to say what angles of Washington-Florida gambling operations were under scrutiny by the Kefauver committee..

Recalls Jury Tampering

Of the 100-million-dollar Washington rackets figure he said: "Obviously this amount of money flowing into the hands of the racket elements increases the difficulties of law enforcement. For example, we found in Washington during the trial of one of the major gambling groups that there had been at attempt to tamper with and influence a juror to bring about an acquittal."

Rice has been in Miami for more than a week tracking links between gambling operations in south Florida and those in other cities. He maintains a law office in Washington. When the Senate committee was formed to probe interstate gambling he became associate counsel under Chief Counsel Rudolph Halley.

Deer Is Found Prancing on Roof Of Yonkers Store

Yonkers, N. Y., June 11 (AP).—It sounded a little too heavy for rain on the roof of a South Broadway store last night. Customers and employes rushed out to investigate.

There, prancing about, was a deer.

The amazed watchers had just figured out the deer must have leaped a 10-foot space from an enbankment that is the level of the store roof at the rear when the deer gave another leap.

This time she landed on the roof of a parked auto, crushing it.

Dynamiters Hit At Homes of Two Enka Nonstrikers

Morristown, Tenn., June 11 (AP).—Deafening dynamite blasts went off in the darkness today at the homes of two nonstriking American Enka Corp. rayon workers.

Sheriff Robert Medlin said eight persons were asleep in the home of Murry Bible when somebody tossed the explosive in a ditch by the front yard. Window panes were shattered, but nobody was hurt.

The second blast was in Hugh Bloomer's front yard, near Bean Station, about 30 miles from the Bible residence. Here again there were no injuries.

The new outcropping of violence came as a strike of the CIO Textile Workers Union against the plant entered its third week. Medlin said the explosions were the third and fourth aimed at nonstrikers since the union walked out to back up demands for extra pay and other benefits amounting to 23 cents an hour.

The sheriff identified Bible as owner of an automobile overturned by a stone-throwing, club-wielding mob early yesterday just outside the plant gates. One man was hurt in that outbreak which Enka Attorney T. W. Iserman called the "worst yet" in 10 weeks of sporadic violence.

Maladministration Charged

Philippines Reported Near Political, Economic Collapse

This is the first of a series of articles on the situation in the Philippines by a veteran correspondent and writer on Far Eastern affairs.

By Harold R. Isaacs

Manila, June 11.—During the last few weeks, many reports and articles critical of the government of the Philippines have appeared in the American press. They have suggested a growing crisis in Filipino affairs.

These writings have drawn an ominous parallel between the present situation in the 5-year-old Republic of the Philippines and the state of affairs in Chiang Kai-shek's China just before it fell to the Communists.

The parallel elements are unmistakable: maladministration and epidemic corruption; a threat of financial breakdown; widespread loss of confidence not only in the government, but in the whole order of things; growing lawlessness and political thuggery; finally, an armed rebellion in the peasant hinterland under Communist leadership.

Of these reports, President Elpidio Quirino querulously charged here some days ago that "outside forces are systematically campaigning to make the Philippines a second China." One of his political whips, Speaker Eugenio Perez of the lower House, complained to me that these public criticisms are "exactly what the Communists want to hear, because the Communists are the only ones who get any good out of it."

The independent press in Manila immediately retorted that Quirino was trying to blame his critics for the evils that lie at the door of his own administration. It demanded that he carry out his promises to clean up the mess instead of trying to blame the whole thing on a "gigantic conspiracy" against him.

Actually, one of the few healthy factors in the situation is that this criticism is being welcomed and echoed by many newspapers and people in the Philippines. If anything, it is sharper and more constant here.

Confused, dispersed and discouraged as many of them are,

Reflects Payroll Expansion

U. S. Consumer Incomes Rise To $212.8 Billion in April

Consumer incomes, the mainspring of retail buying, rolled up in April to a $212,800,000,000-a-year rate, the Commerce Department reported last night.

That was without counting 345 million dollars in April GI life insurance refund payments. These swelled personal incomes, but they can't be counted in annual rates since payments are nearly completed already.

The April showing, exclusive of the insurance payments, constituted a 600-million-dollar annual-rate gain over March and was the second consecutive monthly increase. The rate was well over $209,800,000,000 in actual income payments to individuals in 1949.

The Commerce Department said the March-to-April gain "reflected an expansion in payrolls that was largely offset by declines in proprietors' income and transfer payments."

Total wage and salary receipts rose in April to an annual rate of 136 billion, 700 million dollars, topping March by one billion, 800 million dollars.

"The rise stemmed primarily from increased activity in the durable goods and manufacturing industries," the department said.

"Higher employment and a longer work week in factories producing transportation equipment, machinery and other fabricated metal products were mainly responsible for the advancement of total wages in durable goods manufacturing."

Non-durable goods factory wages,

Homicide Possibility

Clews Hint Man Found Dead Near Savage, Md., Is Capitalite

Maryland's chief medical examiner, Dr. Russell S. Fisher, disclosed last night that the body of a middle-aged man found Saturday near Savage, Md., may be that of a Washingtonian.

State Police has found the mark of a Washington dry cleaning establishment in the coat of the dead man, Dr. Fisher said.

Also found was a Washington streetcar transfer transfer, dated May 9, for a North Capitol st. car line.

But despite indications that the man's throat may have been cut, Dr. Fisher said he was not prepared to certify the death as a homicide.

A search of the files of the dry cleaners, Reliable Cleaners, 1304 Wisconsin ave. nw., has failed to produce identification since the firm changed its marking system a year ago, police said.

A 10-year-old Baltimore boy discovered the body lying partly out of a shallow stream near the Washington-Baltimore blvd., in the Savage area, about 16 miles from Washington.

One possible means of identification may be the "several" laundry marks in the shirt worn by the dead man. State police, cooperating with Metropolitan police, hope to begin work on that angle today.

A search of Washington missing persons records has failed to produce a clew, police said.

An Associated Press report says the victim was about 5 feet 8½ inches tall; weighed about 160 pounds, and was partly bald.

Bank Sees Marked Business Recovery

Philadelphia, June 11 (AP).—American business, the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia reported today, "is probably as strong or stronger now than at any time in the past three years."

The bank said "the past eight months have witnessed a marked business recovery" and that business is "far from being weakened financially by the minor recession of 1949."

The report pointed out that despite the fact that many corporations reported a decline in income last year, this did not mean that the corporations were losing money.

Said the report:

"Among manufacturing industry groups, only the automotive firms showed a substantial increase in earnings; but even the hardest hit industries showed profits."

"Business barometers," the report said, "now point to a very high if not a record level of activity."

The bank report noted that "there are elements of danger" in potential overbuying and overpricing, but added that "the caution exercised by bankers and businessmen in the postwar period thus far speaks well for the ability to avoid speculation and make the best possible use of the resources at their disposal."

'Ideal Father, Mother and 'Press Agent' Son Are Guests of The Post as Nats Drop Pair

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

WHO'S ON FIRST—Harold Willis, 8½, talks over Nat strategy between games yesterday afternoon at Griffith Stadium with Clark Griffith. Looking on are Mrs. Willis and Lieut. Comdr. Harold R. Willis, sr., who was named "Ideal Father of 1950" in The Washington Post's contest, on the strength of Harold's letter. Willis, who is 40, is attached to the Naval Receiving Station in Anacostia. Family lives at 4216 4th st. se.

Everything but the score was "ideal" yesterday for Lieut. Comdr. Harold R. Willis, sr., 40, the Washington area's Ideal Father of 1950, as he watched the Nats-Chisox double-header under sunny skies.

From Box 96, the tanned Navy officer, his eight-year-old son, Harold, jr., and wife, Mary, enjoyed their first game of the season as guests of The Washington Post. The two youngest, Carol Lee, 4, and Richard, 14 months, watched on television at their home, 4216 4th st. se.

Between mouthfuls of crackerjack and hot dogs, with "Pop" Willie keeping score with an intricate system he invented, they urged the Senators on.

"Bobby" groaned each time a foul ball looped into the crowd—always way out of his reach.

"Put one up here . . . why don't you?"

On the "Press Box" program after the game, Bob Wolff asked Mrs. Willis what she thought of her active husband:

"He's just wonderful . . . on Saturday he baby sits and I go galavantin' downtown."

Bobby, whom his dad calls his publicity agent, read the winning letter that made the day at the ball park possible, besides an entertainment schedule for June 18, including a radio interview over WTOP, "all-you-can-eat" dinner at the Hotel Statler, and a show at Loew's Capitol Theater.

"I feel wonderful about this whole thing," the "best" dad admitted as he faced the TV cameras.

however, held to about the same level they had maintained since last November, while total manufacturing wages were pushed to a 15-month high by the showing of hard goods factories.

The decline in proprietors' income—700 million dollars at annual rates—occurred chiefly in farm income, as livestock marketing receipts declined in a season when they normally rise, the department said.

"The net income of farm operators for the first four months of 1950 was about one-fifth less than in the same period of last year," it said.

Consumer incomes include dividend and interest payments, net rent receipts of landlords, social security and relief payments, as well as wages and salaries, business and farm owners profits and other types of personal income.

The department says it figures them on an annual rate basis to facilitate comparison

Auto Crash Fails to Halt Wedding Trip

A honeymoon is a honeymoon. It isn't called off just because the honeymoon car, with bride and groom in it, is wrecked in an accident.

But that nearly happened to young and newly-married Mr. and Mrs. Theodore S. Oakley.

Oakley, 22, and the missus—nee Frederica Manglier, 20, were married at 4 p. m. Saturday at the Sherwood Presbyterian Church, 22d and Jackson sts. ne. They are students at Alleghany College, Pa., where both are education majors.

At 5 p. m. the couple took off in the brand-new sedan owned by the bride's father, Frederick Manglier of 2226 Perry st. ne.

They were heading for the bride's home to pick up their luggage and then leave for two weeks in New Hampshire.

But one block from the house—at Otis and 24th sts. ne.—the car collided with an auto driven by Mrs. Marie A. McManus, 38, of 2209 Quincy st. ne.

No one was injured seriously. The bride and groom escaped with some minor cuts and bruises.

But the honeymoon car was nearly demolished.

"The bridegroom," the bride's mother said yesterday, "was more upset than the bride."

The bride's sister, Mrs. Dewitt Page Perkins, down from Massachusetts with her husband for the wedding, was almost as upset at the bridegroom.

Said Mrs. Manglier: "She told her sister, 'Honey, a honeymoon is a honeymoon, and you're going to have one!"

Mr. and Mrs. Dewitt Page Perkins are now spending a week with Mrs. Perkins' parents while the Perkins auto is in use.

Produce Costs Held Too High costs of getting foodstuffs from grower to consumer. Postwar boosts in freight rates, both by railroads and motor carriers, have added much to the family food bill. Last year the total cost of transporting farm products to market was 3600 million dollars. This is 2¼ times the 1939 cost of 1600 million.

$16.67 Per Capita

This figures out to about $16.67 for each person in the country. Freight rates have gone up 57 percent since 1946.

One result is that some food processors are decentralizing their operations to avoid long hauls. Others are giving up distant markets and aiming their production for nearby consumption.

Last year it cost 18,200 million dollars to market the Nation's food supply. That included buying, transportating and distributing the products. In 1939 this cost was only 8480 million—much less than half.

An example of how modern facilities could lower food costs was presented by W. C. Crow, marketing specialist of the Agriculture Department. Crow said that an up-to-date operation in New York City could reduce the cost of such perishables there by up to 50 percent.

Virtually every State is interested in the New York market, Crow said, because products from 44 States are handled there every day.

Fifty-five cents out of every dollar a New York housewife pays for fruits and vegetables is the cost of handling those commodities after they reach New York City. The remaining 45 cents must pay the farmer for all the growing expense, the transportation to New York, etc.

Could Be Cut To 9c

With modern facilities that cost could be reduced from 55 cents out of each consumer's dollar to 9 cents, Government surveys have shown, Crow said.

Ten percent of all the fresh fruits and vegetables grown for sale in the United States goes through New York's Washington st. market, Crow said. Of that tremendous amount, 20 percent comes from California; another one fifth from Florida and an equal amount from New York and New England States.

"That means that States as far away as Florida and California have a definite stake in the New York business," Crow said. "Improved facilities would greatly increase sales, and affect every truck-growing or fruit area in the country."

Both Virginia and Maryland would be greatly benefitted by any action that would increase consumption of truck and fruit items in New York or any of the other great Eastern cities where Cooley's proposal would be most effective.

Threat of Another 'Dust Bowl' Reported by U. S. Soil Experts

By the United Press

The Agriculture Department fears another "dust bowl" may develop in the Great Plains and Secretary Charles F. Brannan has put his staff to work to see what can be done about it.

Department experts have warned that the current outlook is the "most pessimistic" since the late 1930's when drought and wind dried the soil and forced thousands of farmers to abdicate.

Dry conditions this spring already have forced abandonment of about one-fourth of the wheat seeded in the Great Plains last fall.

Suffering worst were the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles, southwest Kansas and southeast Colorado, a part of the original dust bowl. Experts said there was more soil blowing this spring than at any time in recent years.

One trouble is that short-run profits in some cases run counter to farming practices needed to cope with the dust bowl threat. For example, the postwar boom in wheat prices gave farmers a chance for quick profits and many have ploughed up for wheat grass-covered, sandy soils unsuitable for crop cultivation.

Department experts say this land is highly vulnerable to blowing and should be returned to grasses as soon as possible.

The department wants the farmers to plant unprotected lands now to cover crops. But reports indicate many farmers who had to abandon 1950 crop wheat plantings are holding off seeding the land to feed crops and grasses. Instead, reports say, they are letting the land lie fallow, hoping it will collect enough moisture to sprout wheat planted in the fall for the 1951 harvest.

If the moisture fails to develop the land may go into the winter without adequate cover, and the experts say it may be expected to suffer from serious wind erosion next spring.

Brannan's aides figure that farmers who lived through the last dust bowl and know how bad it was, can be counted on to do their part. But many of the farmers there now are new and there ar some "suitcase" farmers who live in the towns and who don't have to live on the land if the dust bowl starts swirling again.

Klein Seeks Sixth House Term, But Spurns ALP Aid

Rep. Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) yesterday announced he will seek a sixth term but will spurn aid of the American Labor Party if it is offered.

"Two years ago I accepted the ALP designation at the earnest solicitation of a large number of my constituents," he said in a prepared statement, "but only after I made it clear that in so doing I made no commitments . . . in fact, I actively supported and campaigned for President Truman and other Democratic candidates."

"This year," he said, "I do not seek and will not accept the designation of the American Labor Party."

British Reassure U. S. On Schuman Plan

Spaak Asks 'Third Force' In Europe

Dortmund, Germany, June 11 (U.P.).—Former Belgian Premier Paul-Henri Spaak appealed today to Britain and Germany to help form a united Europe which could stand as a "third force" between the United States and Russia.

In a speech to members of the West German Foreign Institute, the president of the Council of Europe's "lower house" said Britain is apparently reluctant to participate fully in European affars for fear of loosening "the close bonds of the British Empire."

"No one wishes Britain to choose between Europe and the Commonwealth," Spaak said. He said Britain could provide a vital link in the formation of a United States of Europe which could stand on its own feet without American aid.

At a press conference earlier, he urged Western Germany to accept associate membership in the Council of Europe, and prophesied that within two years it would become a full member.

He also said Germany would find "allies" in the council for the fight to regain territory lost to Poland.

"What will happen when the United States stops investing in Europe?" he asked. "Is it wise to live on charity from another continent?"

The only answer, he declared, was a united Europe, without frontiers or currency barriers, which could harness all the resources of the old world.

By Alfred Friendly

British officials in Washington have made clear to the Administration that the door has in no way been shut to the United Kingdom's participation in the proposed pooling of European coal and steel operations.

Although British representatives will not attend a six-power meeting on the Schuman plan, beginning Thursday, it has been learned that shortly after that conference, British experts may be engaged with the European participants in vigorous negotiations and discussions on the proposal.

The basis for their discussions will be a British memorandum—a detailed attempt to see what Schuman's bold idea would look like when carried into practice. That paper has been prepared by Sir Edwin Plowden, a top British Treasury economic planner.

6 Committed to Goal

The mechanics have not yet been worked out, but it is understood that Plowden's study will be put in the hands of the six Continental nations that have already committed themselves to the principle of pooled operations, under an international authority, of their steel and coal production and marketing.

Unless Plowden's ideas are so far apart from those of the six nations that discussions would be useless, it is expected conferences will get under way looking toward some form of British participation, even though Britain may not be able to go in on a full-fledged basis.

The six powers meeting for first negotiations on a treaty of agreement are France, West Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and Italy. All appear to have committed themselves to a goal of pooled, supra-national steel operations, although the Dutch have entered a private set of reservations. And all of them, of course, have the opportunity of withdrawing later when they consider ratification of whatever proposed treaty emerges.

Cautious on Buying Idea

The United Kingdom, with its Commonwealth ties and many other different conditions, was unwilling to make the first commitment. Hence it did not meet the French requirements for participation in this week's talks.

Nevertheless, it was learned that the British iron and steel industry, the labor union concerned, and the government itself favor the plan and are eager to be a part of it.

But, as it was first proposed by French Foreign Minister Schuman, and even as it was outlined later by French economic planner Jean Monnet, it was much more of an idea than a careful plan.

The British were too cautious to buy the idea in advance of seeing the plan. Plowden's memorandum is an attempt to make one, and meantime the French and others have worked out their idea in much more detail on anticipated operations.

Negotiations Likely

Hitherto, the British have insisted they could not let their steel and coal industry become subject, without reservations, to the decisions of an international operating authority. The French, on the other hand, insist that this is the essence of the plan and that without such surrender of sovereignty in this area, the plan is nothing.

Nevertheless, it is by no means certain that the obstacle is as great as it might appear; in all such matters, the issue is a question of degree, which admits of negotiations.

The State Department, which in general is highly enthusiastic about the plan, has carefully refrained from any rapping of the British knuckles or cracking of the British heads because of their public attitude of nonparticipation. This suggests that the State Department is itself convinced that the British really intend to negotiate on the plan, and join it if possible.

Mindszenty Foe Gets High Lutheran Post

Budapest, June 11 (AP).—The Rev. Laszlo Dezsery, 36, a supporter of the Communist government's religious policy, today became bishop of Hungary's largest Lutheran diocese.

The new bishop, one of the youngest in Hungary's history, succeeds Lajos Ordass, ousted after a prison term.

Two years ago Bishop Dezsery denounced Josef Cardinal Mindszenty as a representative of "royalist, feudal absolutism." Cardinal Mindszenty now is serving a life term for treason. Dezsery also has urged the Lutherans in Hungary to get along with the government.

Former Bishop Ordass was convicted on October 1, 1948, of speculation in foreign currency and recently was released from prison after serving most of a two-year sentence. Upon his release, a special church court stripped him of his clerical rank.

Dezsery has been pastor of the Obuda district of Budapest and was chaplain to Lutheran students at the university. He is married and has two children. Hungary's Lutherans number about half a million, or approximately 6 per cent of the population. Most Hungarians—65 percent—are Roman Catholics.

There seems to be lilttle doubt that the new bishop owes his rank to the 30-page "open letter in the case of the Evangelical (Lutheran) Church" he wrote two years ago. This letter, which created a sensaton in Hungary, criticized the prewar Lutheran Church for not fighting strongly enough against the regime of Regent Admiral Nicholas Horthy. After the war, the letter declared, Lutheran pastors became "the slaves of the reactionary masses."

The letter warned the church to recognize "that we are in a socialist revolution, a world phenomenon, which cannot be fought with arms."

Peru Jury Rules Out Sole Vote Opposition

Lima, Peru, June 11 (U.P.).—The national electoral jury today ruled out the sole opposition candidate in the July 2 presidential elections, charging that he had used falsified documents to support his candidacy.

An official statement announced that the registration of Brig. Gen. Ernesto Montagne, candidate of the National Democratic League, had been voided. The ruling left Gen. Manuel Odria, chief of the military junta that seized power in October, 1948, alone in the race.

Painter-Archaelogist Recreates the Past . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lindon Smith with his painting, "Tomb of Ramose"

Painter Shows Replicas of Egyptian Art

Dr. Joseph Lindon Smith, one-time landscape and portrait artist, has been living in the past—literally so—for the last half-century.

As a result he now has an international reputation as an artist-archaeologist and his paintings are on exhibiiton in the National Museum of the Smithsonian Institution.

The 86-year-old former Bostonian, who must keep himself thin so he can squeeze through narrow places inside tombs, has been commuting to Egypt for the past 50 winters, except for World War II. There, he and Mrs. Smith have been spending most of their time inside the monuments, making replicas—exact in color, size and form—of Egyptian art.

The Egyptians of the first and second milleniums before Christ spent many hours preparing a tomb—a home for eternity, Mrs. Smith explained yesterday. Thus some of the finest Egyptian art is found inside the tombs.

Many of these were furnished. One dynamic painting by Dr. Smith shows a procession carrying a man's bed, a chest containing clothes, and jugs of oil, birds and flowers for Ramose, keeper of the Royal Greeneries, in the 18th Dynasty about 1400 B. C.

Dr. Smith uses "dry" paint, squeezed out of a tube and paints flat canvases that look like basreliefs. His exhibit will continue until June 28.

Initially, Dr. Smith had no intention of going into this field, but studied instead to be a classical artist. However, while touring, he became interested in archaeology and began this unique type of painting. It is all free-hand drawing with any hint of tracing horrifying Dr. Smith.

Egypt has been Dr. Smith's specialty, but he has also explored ruins in Japan, Java, Persia, Greece, Italy, Egypt, Central America and Cambodia in Indo-China for his archaeological art subjects.

"They don't wriggle and don't complain about the likeness," he notes, laughingly.

Groves Warns of 'Stab in Back'

Hartford, Conn., June 11 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, wartime atom bomb production chief, warned today that the United States would be stabbed in the back" if it traded atomic information with foreign countries.

Speaking to the graduating class at Hillyer College, the wartime director of the Manhattan atomic bomb project said Americans "should insist that their Government maintain adequate security measures" on atomic energy. He said there are some who advocate exchanging ideas with foreign powers "in the guise of freedom and liberty of the individual."

But Groves added that any interchange of ideas would be one-sided, with America receiving nothing but a stab in the back."

"Thinking Americans know by now that the fact we had the atomic bomb is the primary reason we have not been forced into another war. They know, too, that one Nation—Russia alone—has persisted in blocking real peace," the General declared.

Groves said that although "Russia is an expanding, aggressive power," some Congressmen proposed that the United States lead a five-year disarmament plan. This, he maintained, ignored "the proofs of insincerity being piled up daily by Russia and her satellites."

The lawmakers, said Groves, are "wishing for the moon, making headlines at home and propaganda grist which communistic nations will turn against us. But worst of all, they are offering a sugar-coated pill which fosters a cleavage among our own people at a time when we should be solidly united to preserve peace for the world and freedom for all men."

"Our liberty was not obtained cheaply or easily. It can slip away unless it is fought for constantly. Only courage and willingness to sacrifice our very lives, if necessary, will be sufficient," Groves concluded.

Group Urges World Effort At Disarming

Sixteen scientists, educators and clergymen accused the United States yesterday of paying lip service to disarmament while actually discouraging such a step.

In a report signed by Scientist Albert Einstein and Novelist Louis Bromfield, among others, the group said:

"Officially appointed representatives to the United Nations tell the world that the United States wants disarmament and only Russia stands in the way. Yet other American officials do what they can to discourage disarmament.

"In the United States there are vested economic interests with a stake in a large military budget. There is also an emotional attachment to armaments as well as a high degree of military leadership and influence in policy-making branches of Government."

The group, which issued its report through the National Council Against Conscription, urged immediate steps toward total world disarmament, saying that none of the great powers has ever really made a move in this direction.

"Neither Russia nor the United States has given a clear indication that it wants to get out of the war system," the report said. "Neither has pressed disarmament as if it were a major aim of national policy.

"Yet both are receptive to public opinion, to possible economic advantages that might accrue from disarmament, and both want to avoid war. It is in these that hope lies."

The group called for this five-point program for total disarmament:

1. An immediate halt to atomic-bomb production, with stockpiles to be taken over by the United Nations pending further negotiations.
2. Acceptance of the Soviet proposal for national—rather than international—atomic ownership, under an agreement blocking large-scale production.
3. Acceptance of the American proposal for international inspection of atomic resources and production.
4. A compromise in the United States-Soviet disagreement over whether atomic stockpiles should be destroyed before or after international controls go into effect.
5. Abolition of all armies and conventional armaments at the same time atomic weapons are destroyed.

Viet Nam to Get U. S. Machinery, Trucks

Hanoi, Indo-China, June 11 (AP).—Viet Nam will receive urgently needed machinery, transport vehicles and pharmaceutical products from the United States under the one-year, $23,500,000 Indo-China aid program, it was announced tonight.

North Viet Nam Gov. Nguye Hu Tri said his province will get about half of the total aid and will resell the American materials to private industry, creating a national reconstruction fund with the proceeds.

Benton Asks Senate Action For 'Marshall Plan of Ideas'

Sen. William Benton (D., Conn.) appealed to the Senate Foreign Relations committee yesterday to act on his proposal to set up a "Marshall Plan of Ideas" to combat Communist propaganda.

Benton, former assistant secretary of state for public affairs, has introduced a resolution calling for world-wide freedom of information, exchange of students with foreign countries, and other steps to tell the rest of the world about America.

He discussed the proposal on a Gannett News Service broadcast just before leaving for a conference in Italy of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Benton said one of the reasons the Foreign Relations Committee has not yet held hearings on the resolution is because five of its key members are tied up in the investigation of Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy's Communist charges. But he hoped the time "is not too far off" when a subcommittee will be named to consider it.

Discussing the State Department's "Voice of America" program, he said it "has been effective in line with the small amount of money authorized."

A former advertising company executive, Benton noted it has been given a budget of only $34 million and commented, "That wouldn't cover the advertising budget of Proctor & Gamble Soap Co."

over would boost this figure. The Air Force estimate was 31,700 workers lost.

Noting that his economy drive cut out 170,000 civilian jobs in the armed forces last year, Johnson declared that this further heavy cut in the 700,000-man defense rolls would "result in wasteful and inefficient operation."

"It would tend, toward the end of the first year," he said, "to leave us with a high percentage of administrative and clerical personnel (where the turnover ratio is low) and with an inadequate labor force, unbalanced between the various skills (where the turnover ratio is higher).

"It would substantially interfere with, and in many localized activities actually prevent, the continued effective operation of industrial and military establishments."

The report also outlined an estimated effort of the Tabor-Thomas rider which would cut defense funds for such things as civil pay, travel, rent, transportation, communications, etc., by 2 percent.

The Navy said it would cut its funds about 11 million dollars and particularly pinch such activities as reserve training and research and development.

Eight thousand naval reservicts would be denied training by the operation of the secton, it was said.

Four Die in Trapped Cruiser

William Fisher, 29; Mrs. Carol Kreig, about 30, wife of one of the rescued men; William Lahey, jr., about 25; and Hull Wright, a lock tender who went to the rescue.

Saved were James McHugh, 24, owner of the 25-foot cabin cruiser; Charles Reilley, 34; Jack Kreig, 28, husband of the missing woman, and James Woffenden, 50, a lock tender who went to the rescue with Wright in an 18-foot skiff.

All except McHugh and Leahy were from the Pittsburgh area. McHugh, the son of James McHugh, president of a Chicago construction firm bearing his name, is a construction superintendent on a United States Army hospital building job for his father.

Leahy was a civil engineer for the Chicago firm employed on the hospital job. Both are from Chicago.

The cruiser was caught in the boiling eddies where the Allegheny drops 11 feet over the dam at Lock No. 3, about 15 miles northeast of Pittsburgh.

It could not escape from the maelstrom. The reverse current created by the plunging water drove the sleek mahogany cruiser again and again into the face of the dam.

Each time the battered boat staggered back with tons of green water cascading onto the desperate people clinging to its deck.

Kreig, in serious condition with cuts, said he and his companions were invited on a midnight cruise from the Oakmont Boat Club by McHugh. They went up the river through the locks. But on the return trip they missed a lock, he said, and were swept over the dam.

"The boat hit head first and threw all of us out," he said. "We kept bobbing up and down and so did the boat and we all climbed back on. I tried to swim a couple of strokes but was unable to get anywhere near shore and I had to go back to the boat."

The rescue by boat was quickly organized and carried through after an advertising blimp from Pittsburgh made nearly 10 tries to get a towline across the cruiser.

Jaffe to Face Queries Today

notes on the case brought a demand by Senator Brewster (R., Me.) that James K. Vardaman, one-time naval aide to Mr. Truman, be recalled before the Senate committee for questioning about an allusion to him in the papers.

Forrestal wrote on May 28, 1945, that he had asked Vardaman, now a member of the Federal Reserve Board, to "see to it that the President was informed in the matter."

Vardaman told the committee last Thursday that he never had anything to do with the case—that he was never contacted about it by anyone in the Government.

Vardaman said on Saturday that he knew about the Forrestal notes when he was before the committee, but that he was standing by his assertion that he was in no way connected with the case.

After Vardaman testified before the closed hearing, he handed to newspapermen copies of a statement, saying he had read it to the committee and no questions were asked him. A committee official confirmed this. The statement made no reference to the Forrestal diary.

Brewster, not a member of the committee, said Vardaman has "a lot of explaining" to do.

"Vardaman," said Brewster, "should be recalled at once. He should be asked why, if he knew about the diary, and its reference to him, he did not volunteer that information to the committee.

"Why, instead, did he say nothing about it? He certainly knew it was an essential part of the puzzle the committee was trying to unravel."

Committee members regard Jaffe as a key witness in the Amerasia case, which has brought charges in Congress of "cover up" and "whitewash" in connection with its prosecution.

The Justice Department, on the one hand, has said the court case fell apart mainly because evidence had been obtained without search warrants.

it agreed to at Yalta," and forestall a German peace treaty.

"It (the U. S.) intended at a given time to make the unclarified frontier the occasion for a third world war, as Hitler used the Polish corridor," the paper said.

Taegliche Rundschau ignored, however, the 1945 Potsdam agreement which merely handed the German territory to Poland to administer, pending a peace conference.

Western Allied sources said the newspaper's "reckless charges" were an attempt to convince the Soviet bloc countries that Western opposition to Moscow's foreign policy implies the preparation of armed aggression against them.

3 Hyattsville Men Are Held in Theft Of Restaurant Safe

Ocean City, Md., June 11 (AP).—A farmer teamed up with law officers today to bring about the swift arrest of three young men from Hyattsville, Md., on charges that they stole a safe from an Ocean City restaurant.

Police Chief Walter F. Squires identified the three youths as Gerald Boyer, 20, Vincent W. Moore, 19, and James R. Fey, 18, of Hyattsville. They were booked on burglary charges and will get a hearing Monday.

Walter Jarman, proprietor of the Regal restaurant here, told police early today that a safe had been removed from his place during the night. Several hours later, Melvin Parker of the Stephen Decatur road outside Ocean City said he found a battered safe near his farm.

Squires said he retrieved the safe which had not been opened. It contained about $500 in cash.

Later, Parker called back to report a car prowling about the neighborhood. From Parker's desciption, Squires found the car in a motor court here, and arrested the thee men.

I bank by auto at NATIONAL CAPITAL

"And I consider myself a smart businessman! Before National Capital opened their combination 'Drive-in, Walk-Up' banking service, I needed two men to do my banking. One man had to drive around the block while the other waited around at the window. Now with this revolutionary service, one man accomplishes in seconds what used to take two men 25 or 30 minutes to do. This means a double saving for me in these days of high labor costs when time means money.

"Drive-in banking is safer too. No waiting around with large sums of money in your possession. And the National Capital Bank has installed a night depository for the convenience of firms that must heed irregular banking hours.

"Take my advice—call National Capital today and open a business account so that YOU can use this special service."

Accounts insured up to $5,000. The National Capital Bank is a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Federal Reserve System. Open 4 to 6 pm every Friday in addition to regular banking hours.

Philippines Reported Showing Ominous Signs of Collapse

critics both in and outside the administration are looking for a way to do something about the state of affairs and they are hoping for the most intelligent kind of American help in the process.

The moment is one for careful assessment because critical American policy decisions are involved. The State Department has to decide how it is going to propose to bail out the Philippines and keep them from passing, in due course, into the Asian Communist orbit.

There is some evidence that Americans concerned on the spot are trying as consciously as possibly to avoid repeating the pattern of failure in China. They are seeking, although with a certain slow desperation, to find in the Philippines itself a healthy basis on which to build a more successful policy.

The situation here right now is serious rather than critical, critical rather than desperate. The problems are every bit as acute as the published reports make them but the issue is not yet one of the danger of "imminent collapse" of the government or an early victory of the Communists.

Above all, the danger here is not a Russian-Communist conspiracy to snatch the Philippines. It is the danger of the complete failure of those now ruling the islands to come to grips with its peoples' problems. This is the nub and the heart of the matter.

The questions before American policy makers in the Philippines are these: If, as certain Americans are saying, the Philippines cannot and will not be allowed to go down, then with whom will the Philippines stay up? Can a program of effective aid be carried out by and through the present government of the Philippines or will it turn into another Operation Rathole? Is the Quirino administration redeemable? If not, what or who could take its place? If the need is for effective execution of drastic political and social reforms by an austerely honest government, is such a government in view here?

The first and most obvious fact is that the main answers to these questions have to be provided not by Americans but by Filipinos. Americans had their chance for 50 years to lay the basis for political health in the Philippines. They failed in many things, above all in revising the feudal landholding system inherited from the Spaniards, and today's problems are part of the price for that failure.

The main burden today lies on the Filipinos, but it is useful to keep in mind that they are suffering under the handicaps imposed by their history under Spanish and American rule, as well as the handicaps they have created for themselves as an independent nation.

Every facet of the developing crisis in the Philippines today is a product, at least in part, of the legacy of the past. You have to include the dead hand of Spanish feudalism, the landed estate system, church abuses and mass obscurantism.

From the American era you have to include the lopsided development of cliques of political leaders nourished in the old social and economic roots, the attempt to create the forms of political democracy without creating the basis for economic democracy, and the development of an undiversified economy resting on a few key export crops.

You have to add the physical ravages of war, occupation, and reconquest, and then, at the end of it, the dearly sought but highly devalued gift of political independence.

The solutions required are fundamental solutions and the issues have to be understood to be those of a long-aborted revolution. That is why expedients or half-measures by Filipino politicians are not enough. That is why mere military assistance or intervention by the United States is worse than useless.

Tomorrow: The role of the "Huks" in Philippine unrest.

Pittsburgh Resumes Talks in Milk Strike

Pittsburgh, June 11 (AP).—An avalanche of parent protests forced negotiators back in session today in an effort to end the three-day milk famine in metropolitan Pittsburgh.

Physicians warned the health of thousands of infants hinged on the outcome of the intensified talks to settle a strike of 3500 AFL milkmen.

"Unless these infants get the milk they must have," one pediatrician said, "they will be suckers for any bug that comes along."

In Pittsburgh proper, the shortage neared a crisis. An emergency plan to supply fresh milk to needy families collapsed under the weight of the tremendous demand. Supplies of canned and powdered milk were dwindling rapidly.

As representatives of the strike-bound Greater Pittsburgh Milk Dealers Association and AFL union leaders struggled for a compromise settlement, there were these other developments in the situation:

1. Police watched closely for new outbreaks of violence as some individual producers sought to deliver milk despite the strike in the nine-county Greater Pittsburgh area.

2. Mayor David L. Lawrence bluntly ordered company and union officials to chart a "workable" plan of emergency milk delivery. He said he was convinced the lives of infants were in imminent danger.

3. Dairy farmers, caught in the middle by the walkout, were either dumping their supplies or giving milk away on the highways.

Last night milk bottles were hurled through two plate-glass windows of the Colteryahn Dairy from a speeding automobile. Police feared clashes with pickets if farmers attempt to give milk away within the city limits.

The Allegheny County Medical Society, whose telephone lines were swamped with pleas for emergency deliveries, said infants under 18 months were in "grave" danger.

"The situation is serious enough for sick youngsters," one official said. "But even healthy ones need a steady diet of milk to maintain resistance against infection and disease."

The striking milkmen, members of the AFL Milk & Cream Salesmen & Dairy Employes, walked out of 68 plants in seven counties at midnight Friday to support demands for wage and work-week readjustments. An industry spokesman said the association wants to submit the dispute to arbitration, but the union has refused.

Labor Leader From Israel To Speak Here

Abba Hushi, one of Israel's top labor leaders, will fly here to address the second national conference of the American Trade Union Council for Histadrut, to be held at the Hotel Shoreham for three days beginning Friday.

More than 600 delegates representing the AFL, CIO, and independent unions, are expected to attend the meeting of the American friends of Histadrut, Israel's labor federation.

William Green, president of the AFL, and Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, will be the principal speakers.

Abba Hushi is a member of Israel's Parliament and of Histradrut's executive committee. He is a leading expondent of Jewish-Arab cooperation.

During the past three years, the American Trade Union Council for Histadrut has raised three million dollars for the programs of the Israel labor federation presently concentrated on absorbing the flood of immigrants into the new country's economic life.

District Emergency Milk Plan Set Up

milk a day; Glenn Dale Tuberculosis Sanatorium, 220 gallons; Home for the Aged and Infirm, 70 gallons; District Jail, 40 gallons, and the child day care centers, 30 gallons.

At the meeting, Albert Dietrich, international representative of the Teamsters' Union, of which Local 246 is a part, said union officials had not thought it necessary to make "emergency" plans because it was assumed the six dairies which were not struck would supply everyone who desired milk.

The six distributors referred to are Embassy, Lucerne, Model Farms, Richfield, Thompson and Alexandria.

Dairies Deny Lockout

Herman A. Schulteis, Chestnut Farms vice president and a spokesman for all nine dairies, asserted that "all the employers were and are struck." Denying any lockout on the part of any dairy, he added that the dairy representatives were told of the strike—which they understood to be a complete strike—after the union representatives had left the negotiation conference on Saturday.

Thus, said Schulteis, there was "no opportunity" to discuss any emergency arrangements for milk distribution.

General Young said Commissioner Mason and he wanted to emphasize they were making no attempt to settle the strike, take sides, or discuss issues.

Willing To Cooperate

In the argument over the strike-lockout issue, Dietrich said the union drivers and plant workers stand "ready and willing to process and to deliver from the six dairies" which are not being struck, according to the union.

The only issue in the dispute, which involves some 1600 union employes, is over the drivers' work week. The union wants a 40-hour, five-day work week instead of the present 48-hour, six-day work week, with no reduction in pay.

The dairies' final offer, made Friday and rejected at a union meeting last night, included a five-day work week with time and a half pay after 44 hours for the drivers, and no Sunday deliveries.

Fear Customer Loss

The union has objected to elimination of Sunday deliveries on the ground that customers would be lost, thus cutting drivers' commissions.

Pay for the route men is guaranteed at $63.50 a week, plus commission. The average total, according to the union, is $75 or $80 a week.

In another issue raised by the strike, an official in the office of the Virginia attorney general said last night the State antistrike law is not applicable to a milk stoppage. One dairy, Alexandria, is located in Virginia.

Buyers Storm Stores for Milk; Near Drought Expected Today

sold to the "emergency customers" they would be faced with a lack of supply before long.

Reports also were received of sales by farmers direct to consumers, but Health Department officials warned that raw milk thus purchased should be pasteurized before consumption.

Many delicatessens—open on Sunday—found their supplies were quickly bought up and then customers began stocking up on evaporated, condensed and powdered milk. The Shirlington Delicatessen in Arlington, Va., reported this situation.

However, for most Washingtonians the pinch will not be felt until late today. Drivers on most routes, including stores, hotels, and restaurants, generally advised customers Friday and Saturday morning that a strike was in the offing and urged laying in a good supply. These caches are expected to thin out by tonight unless deliveries are resumed.

The usual half million quarts delivered on a Sunday here were on their way to various points along the Atlantic Seaboard from Maine to North Carolina, Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and Virginia Producers Association, declared yesterday.

Normally about 760,000 quarts a day are delivered here, but on Sunday this dwindles by about 30 percent because hotels and restaurants are not served, except for special orders, Derrick explained.

He and his aides worked around the clock Saturday and yesterday making contacts "all over thunderation" to "salvage all we can" of the milk usually sent to the strike-closed local dairies. The farmers stand to lose about $70,000 a day in added trucking costs and lower prices received for the milk, most of which will go into manufactured products such as ice cream, cheese and butter.

Farmers' Flush Season

Such use, traditionally, brings in lower prices, but Derrick pointed out: "This strike couldn't have come at a worse time. We are in the flush season all over the country and we're in no bargaining position. We just place the milk and worry about the price later."

Highland Farms, suppliers of the High's stores, yesterday brought in an extra tankload—about 3000 gallons—and prepared to do the same early today. Their stores began running out of milk in the forenoon, and some patrons began following trucks to stores to assure themselves of milk. There was no rationing.

Most of the struck dairies were closed. Some answered telephone inquiries, but had no suggestions as to where to purchase milk. At Embassy an employe moaned that he had received "thousands of calls" but "can't sell a quart."

A Wakefield Dairy worker said a called offered "to pick up 1500 quarts, if he could get it," but this was turned down since the pickets paraded steadily outside. At Harvey Dairy, a spokesman said he received "several pathetic calls," but "our hands are tied."

Boy Scout Camping Facilities Increased

Camp Theodore Roosevelt, Washington area Boy Scout camp, has been enlarged to accommodate a 27 percent membership increase this year, according to Thomas Somerville 3d, chairman of Washington's Council Camping Committee.

The camp is expected to accommodate 300 Scouts each week with 18 troop sites in operation at once. The camp opens June 26 for nine weeks. Additional accommodations also are available at Camp Herbert Hoover in the Shenandoah Mountains.

World Sugar Production May Set New Record

World production of sugar is expected to set a record this season, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday.

The volume was forecast at 37,999,000 short tons, raw value, or 2 percent more than the previous record set last season and 10 percent more than the prewar average.

Crops in Puerto Rico, Cuba and a number of countries in Europe and South America are turning out larger than earlier estimates.

AVC Unit Urges Action On Post Plan

The Washington Post's editorial proposal for creation of a non-partisan "National Security Commission" has received the unanimous indorsement of the National Planning Committee of the American Veterans Committee.

The time "is clearly NOW," said the AVC resolution, for the creation of a commission of leading citizens to assess various aspects of the national security, including the problem of internal loyalty.

"AVC believes that this proposal"—made in an editorial, "The Road Back," on May 22—"is rather a long step in the direction of sanity and therefore ultimately of peace."

The resolution, released yesterday by L. C. Pakiser, executive director, said "a nonpartisan National Security Commission can be appointed which will command the general confidence of the American people. The acknowledged high caliber of presidential commissions in recent years strenghtens our conviction that a National Security Commission that meets the crucial test of wide public confidence is possible.

The resolution said that while in wartime national unity is achieved by the Government's assumption of wartime power, to grant such powers in peacetime "could only have the effect of increasing the possibility of a war whose destructive potential no sane person can desire.

"Therefore, AVC indorses this proposal for a National Security Commission, the personnel of which will command general confidence; which will answer the present need for unity by raising the issue of national security above the play of party politics and which, at the same time that it answers the security needs of our present situation, will not act as a further step in the direction of war."

Flier Sacrifices Life Trying to Save Girl

Tours, France, June 11 (U.P.).—A young pilot, thrown free when his small plane crashed today, rushed back into the blazing wreckage to rescue his 18-year-old girl friend and both died.

Guy Artiff, 24, was tossed from the plane in the crash, his clothes afire. Passersby rolled him on the grass and put out the flames.

But when he dashed back to the plane to save Ginette Esquieu, his gasoline-soaked clothes burst into flames and both were burned to death.

Griffis to Confer Awards

Buenos Aires, June 11 (AP).—United States Ambassador Stanton Griffis on Monday will confer membership in the Legion of Merit on Admiral Enrique B. Garcia, Argentine Navy Minister, and other top naval officers.

Don't worry, Dad, there's plenty of clean hot water
. . . "Your Unseen Friend" takes care of that

Like most good providers, Dave Horton is usually an "early bird."

This morning, however, he overslept. So first the twins . . . and now big sister Sue . . . have beaten him to the shower.

But Dad's not worried. He knows there'll be plenty of clean hot water for him and for household chores. His "Unseen Friend" takes care of that.

His "Unseen Friend," and yours, is the Nickel alloy tank in his automatic water heater. Heart of the heater, this tank is built of solid, corrosion-resisting Monel . . . for longer service. And built, too, for hotter hot water.

Hotter because, with a solid Monel tank, you can safely get water hot enough so clotheswashers and dishwashers do their job right. Then, for ordinary purposes, you mix in the cold . . . thus making your hot water go lots further.

With a Monel tank, you also get cleaner hot water — water free from tank rust.

Hot water clean enough to drink . . . hot enough for any and all household chores! Is this what you want? Then just ask your dealer if there's a Monel tank in the next water heater you buy.

Nickel or Nickel alloys are in almost every work-saving and pleasure-giving appliance in your home.

You don't see the Nickel because it's usually intermixed with other metals . . . to make your range or T-V set work better. That's why Nickel is called "Your Unseen Friend."

Free new booklet for home owners—tells what to look for when you buy a water heater. Tells why a Monel tank is best for your water heater. Write for your copy today—ask for "What makes Monel different?" Address Dept. 263z, New York 5, N. Y. Special note: Monel tanks are now available in large sizes—125 to 300 gal. capacities; suitable for apartments and industrial use.

Holy Year Pilgrims From Area Reach Paris And See the Louvre, Sorbonne, Other Sights

Miss Kathryn E. Bowers, public relations assistant at the Hamilton National Bank, is hostess for more than 200 Washingtonians now touring Europe following their Holy Year pilgrimage to Rome. From time to time she is reporting to The Washington Post. In the following letter she writes of visiting France.

Paris, France
Tuesday, May 30

Dear Reader:

On Friday, May 26, at midnight, this group of weary pilgrims arrived in Paris.

Our hotel in Paris was the Moderne Palace—which must have been named in 1898! We were settled by 1 a. m. and renewed our energy for Saturday's sightseeing. Our first stop was the Louvre, with its Mona Lisa, Venus de Milo and Winged Victory.

The spectacular gold statue of St. Joan of Arc, standing near the place she was wounded, was seen on our way to the Arch of Triumph. This latter structure contains the tomb of France's Unknown Soldier. When people fuss about the confusion created by our Washington circles, they should see the one containing the Arch. It has 12 streets leading into it.

Our next stop was Les Invalides. Here the Emperor Napoleon is buried in a huge dark red marble tomb.

Another impressive tomb under the same dome is that of Marshal Foch. In order to achieve that odd shade of French blue, not obtainable in the marble itself, stained glass windows cast a bluish haze all over the tomb, as a tribute to a great French soldier.

After lunch we first went to the Holy Chapel, built in 1246, a small Gothic church, ranking with the Cathedral of Notre Dame as the most beautiful structure of this type in the world.

We rode by the Sorbonne, recognized as one of the greatest educational institutions in the world, named for its founder, knowing that France had attracted students since the ninth century, established a school for students who had the desire for the highest possible scholastic achievements.

Notre Dame Cathedral, with its famous facade, was next. It is not so appealing to the tourist eye as some others, but I am sure it is a thing of beauty to an architectural student.

Saturday night about 50 of us got some Paris night life atmosphere by going to the well-known Tabarin night club.

On Sunday morning those of us especially interested in the devotion to the Miraculous Medal and the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul went to the Mother House of the order. The Very Rev. John S. Spence said mass at the altar under which lies the perfectly preserved body of Catherine Laboure, who died in 1880.

Our own Herman G. Lauten served as acolyte for Monsignor Spence.

Sister Mary Rafferty explained the many interesting things in the chapel, in the absence of Sister Mary Basil, the American Sister Secretary, who was in Rome. It was then suggested that we go around the corner to the Church of St. Vincent, which we did, led by the Rev. John B. Argout, and said a prayer at the solid silver casket containing the body of St. Vincent de Paul, high above the main altar in the church.

On Monday morning we went off at 8 o'clock for a four-hour journey, by bus, west of Paris to Lisieux. We first visited the Carmel, where there is a reliquary of St. Therese of the Child Jesus, as well as her first communion dress, her long golden hair, and her brown religious habit.

The little town was teeming with visitors, because this was Whit-Monday, a religious holiday in France. On the outskirts of the village is a basilica, started in 1937 and still incomplete, erected in honor of this little Carmelite nun who was canonized in 1925.

On Tuesday morning we bid adieu to a number of our pilgrims who sailed for home on the S.S. De Grasse.

Then six of us squeezed into a taxi, meant to carry five, and rode to the highest point in Paris, to the impressive Sacre Coeur basilica.

Those who were left at our hotel then transferred to the Lyon Palace Hotel, where several groups were consolidated.

Around the corner, on the Place de l'Opera, it was a familiar sight to see Brentano's and to make a purchase there of paper on which to write these articles.

Our visit to France has come to an end and we have run the gamut from the almost tangible spirituality of Lourdes to the gay city which attracts most European travelers—Paris.

The latter itself is a place of contrasts, with its huge artistic monuments, its broad squares and avenues and nearby its narrow streets and tiny shops or homes.

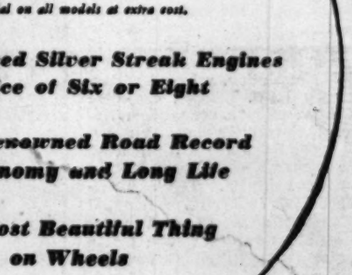
Look in the Book by Bell

This told the ladies what to wear

From 1830 to 1898, Godey's Lady's Book set the styles for women. In this magazine, Grandma learned not only what to wear, but how she should behave in company, what she should say and even what to think! Godey's fixed the fashions and molded the morals of women more than any other magazine of that era.

This tells the ladies where to buy



Modern women find the answers to their buying problems in the YELLOW PAGES, your Classified Telephone Directory. Quickly and easily, this handy book locates the products and services you need—tells who sells it and where. And that includes unusual, hard-to-find items as well. Just look in the book and you'll save time, trouble and travel.

Church Called Best Antidote To Bomb Ills

The Church must provide the proper atmosphere for individuals who are struggling with the problems of the hydrogen bomb and Russian power, the Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn declared yesterday.

Dr. Glenn, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, said the hydrogen bomb itself is "one more weapon" in the long evolution of armaments which began with the bow and arrow.

"It is not boards and commissions and bishops that come to the right answers," he said. "The truth is discovered by individuals who work them out a bit at a time."

"We may not get the right answer, but we can give faithful encouragement to those that will," he said.

He urged that men focus their attention to discussions of three major issues which face them today. These are the Point Four program for aid to underdeveloped areas, socialism versus free enterprise, and Atlantic Union versus the United Nations, Dr. Glenn said.

'Real' Church Seen Emerging For Chinese

Annapolis, Md., June 11 (AP)—A former bishop in China said today that "a real Chinese church is emerging" from Christianity's fight for survival under Communism.

"The Chinese Christian faces a bitter struggle, but not a hopeless one," said the Right Rev. Lloyd R. Craighill, formerly Episcopal bishop of Anking, China.

Bishop Craighill discussed the future of religion in Red China in a sermon at St. John's College baccalaureats services.

"From many Christian universities come reports that chapel services on a voluntary basis are better attended than before the Communists came," he said.

"A recent letter from Anking said, 'Here in the church the congregations are spilling over,'" he added.

Chinese Christians "are facing a despearte struggle for existene," Bishop Craighill said.

Bishop Craighill gave the baccalaureate sermon in historic St. Anne's Episcopal Church. He addressed the graduating class of 28 who will receive Bachelor of Arts degrees at commencement Monday.

Milk Strike

Some arrangements have been made to alleviate the most acute hardships caused by the combination of strike and lockout that has cut off Washington's milk supply. Nevertheless, the fact that the strike and the lockout were called before any steps had been taken to supply the needs of hospitals and families with infants is an impressive reminder of the menacing potentialities of disputes that tie up essential industries, whether local or national.

The union, of course, can assert that its members have the right to strike. Moreover, it points out that only three companies have been struck, the other six unionized dairies having closed down following the strike announcement. On the other hand, the companies maintain that since they were operating under a master contract, a strike against three arbitrarily selected companies is a strike against all of them. Both workers and employers, therefore, disclaim responsibility for the completeness of the tie-up, and both sides advance strong arguments to support their claim.

However, the question that concerns the public is not which side is to blame for the breakdown of negotiations but how strikes of this kind can be prevented or at least be restricted in scope so that public health and life itself will not be endangered. Public sentiment in favor of banning strikes that create national emergencies is steadily growing. Furthermore, it is generally recognized that strikes which deprive municipalities of police and fire protection and other essential public services cannot be tolerated. The difference between such services and those rendered by private agencies that deliver milk or other foodstuffs, provide local transportation and so forth is chiefly one of degree. If these private services on which the population of our large cities are so dependent are repeatedly interrupted by strikes or lockouts, legislative restrictions on the right to strike or shut down the local supplying industries will be the inevitable result.

Classless Baseball

The Army has carried its reform of the caste system too far, it seems to us, in its new regulation on baseball. Army teams may not participate, according to a new order, unless at least 50 percent of the players on the field are enlisted men. This, and similar regulations covering other sports, are intended to preserve the "fraternal balance" and increase "fraternization" between officers and enlisted men. In other words, if the composition of a team were five enlisted men and four officers and it suddenly became necessary to replace one of the enlisted men, the team manager would be required to send in another enlisted man even though he might be the epitome of the Sad Sack and the available officer replacement might be an embryo Joe DiMaggio.

So far as we know, officers have no monopoly on baseball talent in the Army, and the problem may never arise. But somehow we can foresee a canny team manager using the regulation to slug the ears off an unhappy opposing team. If GIs are like most sports enthusiasts, they will worry a lot less about preserving "fraternal balance" at a tense moment than about losing the game because of a silly rule.

Juvenile Court Study

The Juvenile Court Advisory Committee, under the chairmanship of G. Howland Shaw, has ably discharged its duty in the controversy between Judge Cockrill and the two administrative officials who have resigned in protest against the judge's policies. While expressing appreciation of "the efficient and devoted service rendered to the court and to the community" by Miss Clary and Miss Fagrie, the committee maintained an objective attitude. It candidly recognized that confidence in the Juvenile Court has been impaired and suggested a practical means of repairing the damage. The requested study of the court's policies and administrative practices by a committee of three drawn from the Children's Bureau, the Administrative Office of the United States Courts and the Department of Justice would have the great advantage of placing the controversy into the hands of experts concerned only with operation of the court in the public interest.

We think Judge Cockrill is also to be commended for her pledge of full cooperation in such a study. She says that she will "welcome an objective evaluation of the Juvenile Court policies and practices in accordance with the suggestion of the advisory committee." Presumably this means that the judge will request such a study, for that is the only way in which it could be initiated in a friendly atmosphere. An objective appraisal of the court's work would be of the utmost value to the judge herself in shaping future policies. Undoubtedly it would be welcomed by the community. We hope that Judge Cockrill will follow up the favorable impression that has been created by formally requesting that the study be undertaken.

Psychological Offense

President Truman's address at St. Louis, which was broadcast by the Voice of America in 24 languages, recognizes an important transition in the cold war. While he spoke with unusual vehemence about Soviet imperialism, his words seemed to be infused with a new confidence in the ability of the free world to protect itself against the machinations of the Muscovites without resort to arms. Mr. Truman did not himself talk about the new defensive weapons, but we suspect that they were much in his mind when he said: "We know that the free world has both the will and the means to insure its own survival." Near the close of his remarks he also asserted: "The free nations of the world have all the elements of strength necessary to protect themselves from aggression."

At the same time the speech was commendably free from mere muscle-flexing. "The strength of the free world," he said, "is not to be calculated primarily in military terms. Economic, political and moral strength are equally essential . . ." His emphasis was on the Marshall Plan, the Schuman plan and the development of balanced collective forces that will enable the Western world to live in peace without danger of any country being crushed beneath the weight of militarism. In contrast to some of our jingoists, he left no question about the object of the United States' policy. "Above all," he said, "I wish to emphasize that the objective of our efforts is peace, not conflict." Peace is not to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery, but the American people have demonstrated their willingness to pay other substantial prices for it.

From this impregnable position the President could indulge in plain speaking about Moscow's duplicity without danger of being misunderstood. "With a cynical disregard for the hopes of mankind," he said, "the leaders of the Soviet Union have talked of democracy—but have set up dictatorships. They have proclaimed national independence—but imposed national slavery. They have preached peace—but devoted their energies to fomenting aggression and preparing for war." Regardless of what the status of our weapons may be, the world must not be allowed to forget these ugly facts. Nor can they be dissociated from the fact that the Soviet regime is maintaining the largest peacetime armed force in history.

As we see it, the policy proclaimed by the President is one of strong military defense and strong psychological offense. This is realistic and forward-looking. For while the foremost immediate objective is to avoid conflict, it is equally true that freedom cannot be reconciled with tyranny, and for the mere sake of survival the free nations must pursue a relentless struggle against the spread of terror and dictatorship. Even if the new weapons should give virtual assurance against a Soviet invasion of western Europe, and therefore against an attack upon the United States, the struggle for men's minds would continue. And this is likely to be the decisive factor. It is sound strategy, therefore, to match our improved defensive position in the military sphere with intensified efforts to keep the world aware of the advantages and the potentialities of freedom.

French Press

The French National Assembly has before it a proposed law drafted by the Minister of Information that would establish a double-headed Press Council designed to "safeguard the dignity and independence of the French press." One half of it, to be called the High Council, would be composed of publishers, editors and heads of press associations. The other half, to be called the Council of Newspapermen, would be composed of journalists elected by their colleagues in the trade, under the chairmanship of a judge. The aim seems altogether laudable. The effect, we surmise, would be disastrous.

Although France has no barrier to such a scheme in its organic law, comparable to the First Amendment of the United States Constitution, a long tradition of press freedom in France would seem to discountenance it. French newspapers, which tend much more than our own to be party organs, are fiercely competitive, ideologically as well as commercially. And it is on competition among them that the French, like ourselves, have long relied for regulation. The theory of competition is that it insures the survival of the more fit.

In France, and of course in the United States, too, competition has been diminished by concentration of ownerships; and it can scarcely be denied that, by any rational standards, some exceedingly unfit newspapers have survived, indeed flourished. Competition has operated also, it must be acknowledged, to force some wretched journalistic practices on newspapers that might not otherwise have embraced them and to put a premium on gratification of the lowest common denominators of popular taste in both countries.

Nevertheless, we do not believe that a remedy is to be found in any kind of governmental regulation. A press council might well have utility in elevating journalistic standards. But a press council under government auspices would inevitably undercut the independence of the press, however much it might promote its dignity. A dignified press is no doubt highly desirable. But an independent press—that is, a press wholly independent of the government—is an indispensable attribute of a free society.

Booming Suburbs

Although the new census figures for Virginia suburbs of Washington probably do not meet the full hopes of the most enthusiastic civic boosters, certainly their growth in the last decade has been little short of fantastic. Perhaps the most amazing has been that of Arlington County, which has ballooned from a population of 57,040 in 1940 to 135,240. Arlington is now the third largest city in Virginia. The City of Alexandria also has nearly doubled in population, from 33,523 to 61,601. In a smaller way Falls Church has an even more impressive record. It has grown from a sleepy village of 2575 to a bustling, bursting suburban center of 7529.

Nor do the census figures reflect the full growth, much of which has been outside corporation limits. Both Alexandria and Falls Church have suits pending to annex substantial areas which are already part of those cities in all but name. These annexations, if approved, will raise the city totals materially—though, of course, they will come out of the Fairfax County total of 98,193 (which itself is a 58,000 increase since 1940). In the case of Falls Church, the annexation is expected to more than double the population again.

Growing pains are evident in many ways in neighboring Virginia. In spite of the exuberant note this expansion reflects, a word of caution is also in order. Lovely old sylvan areas are rapidly becoming built-up communities, not always with the most forethought as to appearance or balance. It is more than ever important for these Jack-and-the-Beanpole cities to set aside ample park areas and preserve for the future some of the charm that is rapidly vanishing before the bulldozer and cement mixer. It is no less important for these communities, which are bedrooms of the National Capital, to be integrated with Washington for purposes of over-all planning, pollution control, utility regulation and the like.

Futile Gabfest

Filibusterers are among the worst enemies of representative government because they attempt to defeat pending measures, not by the weight of argument, but by delaying procedures that prevent them from coming to a vote. When members of Congress engage in filibustering they tacitly admit that there is a good chance that a majority of the legislators favor the proposal they are trying to talk to death. The filibuster is for that reason rightly discredited as a device for thwarting the legislative will. Otherwise it serves no purpose, except the dubious one of self-advertisement, as in the case of Senator Cain's one-man filibuster against extension of Federal rent control.

We fail to see what Senator Cain accomplished by his talk marathon, except to exhaust his colleagues and delay action on other important business on the Senate calendar. To be sure, an agreement was reached to vote on a motion to recommit the bill, instead of proceeding at once, as Senator Lucas wished, to vote on the bill itself. However, this agreement appears to be a hollow victory for the opponents of the bill. Chairman Maybank of the Banking and Currency Committee has promised that if the bill should be recommitted it would be immediately sent back to the floor. Consequently, it is no more than a preliminary, time-consuming test of the strength of the opposing forces.

Senator Cain has given warning that he will attempt to resume his filibuster if the recommittal motion is defeated. If he does so, we hope Majority Leader Lucas will again order a night session. The minority leader, Senator Wherry, who introduced the motion to recommit, has promised to do his "very best to expedite a vote as quickly as possible." Republicans as well as Democrats ought to lend their aid to that objective.

Apart from the fact that the Cain filibuster has been a senseless waste of time and an exhausting ordeal for busy Senators, it has distracted attention from the merits of the controversy over rent control. The question that Congress has to decide is whether another year of rent control is in the public interest. For the reasons given in a recent editorial The Washington Post believes that the pending compromise control measure should be passed. In any case, it would be the height of legislative irresponsibility for the Senate to permit a single individual or a minority group to defeat efforts to decide the issue by a test vote before the existing rent-control law expires.

DEEP TIDE

Change it is,
And strange it is,
Sweet water green and salt,
To find at flood in time's bay
A tide that sunders love away;
And the heart at halt.

Then No is good
And slow is good;
But another love to build.

And who that heard those waters pour
Built not upon the same deep shore
When storm stilled?

Island love
Or inland love,
The end of it is known.
Better the wind and weather hard,
Or sky soft and night starred,
But danger met alone.

Strange it is
And change it is,
Drag or hurry the blood,
To live against time's ocean side.
In a house of sand near ebb tide,
And expect flood.

Parents' Responsibility

Your June 7 correspondent, Mrs. Webb Taylor, certainly solves the problem posed by Columnist Malvina Lindsay regarding the training of youth for democracy. For the "competition of authority, rosy promises of security, the fanfare of militarism that the police state offers," Mrs. Taylor will substitute the regimen of the compulsory nursery school for the youth age 3 to 5. Here we will prevent delinquency and develop sound citizenship—i.e. "fair play" and "good social habits." The program cannot but meet with success, for our nurseries will be staffed with teachers with such love and understanding of children as we usually hear extolled only the second Sunday every May.

Like Mrs. Taylor, I am a mother and I am tired. It's now 1:30 a. m., and the jobs facing me tomorrow are tomorrow's plus a fair number of today's left over. Should the Government wish, it may take over my laundering, my cleaning, my cooking and especially my dishwashing, but it shall not take over the nurture of my children! Their early training in "good social habits" will be received at home with their father and mother.

"We alone are responsible for the existence of our children; we alone are responsible for their development—for their devotion to their God, to their country, and to their neighbor. Few mothers have the ability to fully develop their "children's best traits and individual talents." Many mothers and fathers, however, do a much better job for their several children than the best teacher possibly could do for a dozen.

We parents cannot become so easily discouraged. We cannot delegate our responsibilities and freedoms in these matters to others. The moment we give up the privilege of disciplining and educating our own children is the exact moment the Hitlers and the Stalins may take over the job!

Juvenile Court

I am amazed at the temerity of the two staff members of District Juvenile Court who have attacked Judge Edith Cockrill.

It seems from what I can gather of the case that these ladies didn't approve of the way Judge Cockrill was running the court. Specifically, they questioned the judge's practice of exercising her own judgment in committing or not committing offenders.

Perhaps these subordinates should have taken over policy making for the court and handed down the decisions. The statements they issued to the press were about that brash in tone.

Probation and administrative officers of the court, professionals in their field, have a necessary and important part to play. The court, indeed, would be blind and groping without their services. But sometimes they get the idea that they know it all—that others, including the judge herself, are mere laymen. They seem to want to tell the court what to do. In this instance they complain, in substance, that the judge has damaged the court they love by refusing to follow their advice.

The community has a proper means of dealing with a judge who fails in duty. For one thing, newspapers keep a vigilant eye on the courts and have never been timid about revealing bad practices. But it is not up to the court's staff to attempt to impose its ideas of policy on the court or to censure the judge for committing a slightly larger percentage of offenders than the previous judge. Percentage has nothing to do with it. The judge has to decide each case on its merits, in the light of what is best for the child and the community. The attitude of these zealous ladies is contemptuous of the court, uncalled for, improper and distasteful to the public. The court is to be congratulated for dealing with them in a forthright and effective manner.

"Damnable Obsession"

Walter Lippmann's June 1 column, "The Damnable Obsession," deserves careful reading.

We need to condemn in all possible ways the "incendiary utterances from the Pentagon, from the State Department, from various foreign missions abroad, in Congress, and in . . . radio and press commentaries."

It is these people who are planting far and wide the idea that war is inevitable. It is these people who are treating "the Atlantic community as a military coalition for war."

This Administration needs to identify itself more honestly and more positively with the idea of peace, or it will pass into history as nothing but a regime of determined militarists.

"Neglecting Mr. Ozaki"

You are to be congratulated for your June 7 editorial, "Neglecting Mr. Ozaki." The State Department is apparently too busy to honor a 91-year-old liberal statesman who has worked consistently and under most difficult conditions for Japanese-American friendship and to whom we also owe the cherry trees which are a source of such unfailing pleasure and beauty. Mr. Ozaki's trip to America should have been the culmination of a long and most useful official career. As matters stand, the Japanese people will wonder whether the United States only honors people for their future usefulness.

By contrast, the Administration has provided lavish receptions for Latin American presidents. Is this contrast a consequence of preoccupation with power politics or simply evidence of lack of breeding?

The Administration is apparently seeking to associate itself with the sesquicentennial of Thomas Jefferson's election as President. It will be recalled that Jefferson gave hospitality to Dr. Joseph Priestley, the eminent physicist persecuted in England for liberal opinions. He honored men for what they were and what they stood for, not for what they seemed to be and what they controlled.

For Leadership In Ideology

Mr. Childs and Mr. Lippmann illuminated in your June 6 issue what is the gravest long-term deficiency of our foreign policy. The sterile idea of "containment" continues to have its negativizing repercussions in the evolution of our new total diplomacy, the core of which is to be the creation of "conditions of fact" which are to affect the Soviet Union. This misemphasis has caused the increasingly evident lopsidedness in our foreign policy which more and more people are coming to condemn.

Since negotiation with the Soviet has failed in the past, we have abandoned efforts in that quarter and are concentrating on the admittedly necessary business of rebuilding Western military strength. This abandonment is not confined simply to negotiations and overtures to the Soviets; it unfortunately seems to extend to all areas of constructive leadership outside the realm of material aid.

This decision to create "conditions of fact" is founded on a misconception as to the nature of overtures and negotiations in the international field. Not only do such gestures serve to keep open the door for such slight chances of honorable agreement as present themselves but they serve to focus and concentrate the energies and hopes of the West for peace, and to give occasions for revivification and reaffirmation of the integrity of our aims and ideals.

The Soviets, to be sure, are refusing to talk in order to force recognition of the Chinese Communists. This is not our reason. We have defaulted seemingly because our leaders lack that very "patience" which they wish to have popular opinion maintain.

But the truly serious results of this decision can be seen elsewhere. We have abandoned leadership in the field of ideology to the Soviets. They are currently embarked on a vast "peace" campaign in the West to which we are replying only (though not negligibly) with arms aid and material assistance, and a mildly effective propaganda campaign. We seem to be deliberately eschewing those occasions for the statesmanlike gestures which present themselves. Yet those occasions and the response they call forth are the height of great political leadership so essential in a time of crisis.

In times past this country has been fortunate in having leaders who were masters of the brilliant stroke in high political leadership. The Declaration of Independence of Thomas Jefferson and the Continental Congress, the Emancipation Proclamation of Lincoln, Wilson's 14 Points, and the Atlantic Charter of Roosevelt and Churchill are examples. The novel, intelligent and timely political proposal marked high points in the careers of these men and illuminated and refreshed the appeal of various aspects of the democratic ideal to those who struggled for its furtherance.

It is in this area that our foreign policy gravely needs attention. Opportunities have appeared in the past for the incandescent reaffirmation of our ideals which these times demand. —and they have been lost by the present Administration the proj- been rejected. The current proposals in the Senate by Senator McMahon are frowned on. The only recent light in the West has come from M. Schuman of France. The leadership nowadays makes exceptionally poor use of the great opportunity which radio and television continually offer to them. In the crucial realm of ideals we are adrift.

The Administration should never forget that it is leading half a world of anxious, ordinary people who want continuous and inspired leadership of the highest order. The President and the Secretary of State may recognize this as an intellectual matter but until they acknowledge it in their psychical guts, as Mr. Churchill has, they will not begin to lead the West as it imperatively needs to be led, within the spacious and brilliant confines of our truly mighty tradition of democracy and individual freedom.

Matter of Fact

THIS reporter can think of no better way to begin a summary of a long investigation in Europe than to put in print what Trygve Lie left out. The Secretary General of the United Nations made the long journey to Moscow, after all, to find a way to end the cold war. Yet the unhappy Lie's confidential report to the governments in London and Paris, unlike his report to the public, was in fact a report of worse than failure.

To dispose first of what is least essential, but was much emphasized by Lie, he was given at Moscow a superspecial performance of the Stalin's ancient charade as an amiable, peace-loving old party. The general idea conveyed was that only benevolent Uncle Joe was holding in check the fire-eaters of the Politburo. It was more than hinted, in fact, that the other Soviet leaders would behave in a much more violent manner if Stalin were not there to stop them.

This is a familiar comedy, which the British leaders, like the American leaders, have often seen played before. It meant nothing during the war and means nothing now. It is more significant indeed that Lie found Stalin in excellent health. If this is so, we cannot even hope for Soviet policy to be disrupted or diverted during the next years by an internal struggle for succession.

SECOND, the men of the Kremlin naturally assured Lie that once the Chinese Communists had replaced the Nationalists on the U. N. Security Council, the Soviet Union and her satellites would again participate fully in U. N. affairs. This formed the basis of the only concrete recommendation in Lie's recent public report, which was otherwise a mere plan for a gigantic game of "Let's pretend."

Even Lie is not so foolish, however, as to have much faith in stopping the cold war by wishing it away. He did not spend all his time in Moscow listening to Stalin's protestation of benevolence and talking about "making the United Nations work." In fact, he asked Stalin and the other members of the Politburo he was permitted to meet, whether there was any practical, serious world settlement which they would agree to.

The reply, it can now be stated authoritatively, was to confront Lie with most of the same old demands long ago made familiar by Molotov and Vishinsky at many international conferences.

Significantly, particular emphasis was placed on the Soviet demands for a German settlement, that were last put forward at the Paris conference to end the Berlin blockade. The details of the demands made at Paris—the establishment of a "democratic" (i. e. Communist-controlled) government, and so on—need not be set down here. It is enough to say that there was just one meaning in the Paris demands, and in the less precise demands made to Lie.

THE MEANING of these demands is that the Kremlin will only be satisfied with concessions permitting the early capture of Germany by the Soviet Union. The capture of Germany, of course, would in turn lead to the eventual Russian capture of all of western Europe. In short what the Kremlin insists upon in Europe is another infinitely vaster Munich, sure to be followed by infinitely more terrible consequences. This fact must be weighed, furthermore, with the complementary fact of the Soviet drive for Asia.

This brief, second-hand, but authoritative summary of what Lie told the Paris and London governments is worth setting down for just one reason. As Secretary General of the United Nations Lie has, after all, been decidedly sympathetic to the Soviets. He went to Moscow at the height of a Kremlin "peace offensive," with every Communist Party and Communist front in Europe bellowing for "peace" day and night. If the Kremlin intended to make proposals for an honorable and practical world settlement to any one at all, Lie should have been that man.

Instead, Soviet imperialism proved to be as strong as ever, and piecemeal surrender was suggested as the right way for the Western world to make peace with Moscow. The U. N. Secretary General, who does not like to put hard facts in blunt language, will no doubt dislike and may probably deny this description of his experience. But if Lie's statements in Paris and London are to be trusted, the bleak truth remains. After Lie's journey, we know, better than ever, exactly where we stand.

Cowboy Brotherhood

Hopalong Cassidy has accomplished what the religious leaders, the teachers and the parents have failed to do. He has reduced all small boys, and their sisters too, to one common level. There are no class distinctions, no barriers among Hoppy fans. The rich and the poor, the white and the black, Protestant, Catholic, Jew—all ride down the trail together in one joyous brotherhood. And if one small pardner "shoots" another "dead," you know it is just in fun, and nobody gets hurt.

The adult world, especially the politicians, could very well stop, look and learn. For here is pointed up one of the great teachings of all time—a little child shall lead them.

The American Commitment In Japan

Lippmann

THERE IS an unexamined assumption in much of the discussion over here that in any peace treaty with Japan the United States would be giving up valuable strategic assets. The idea is that while we occupy and govern it, Japan cannot be captured by the internal Communists or conquered by Russia; in case of war these critical islands would not, therefore, be hostile, or neutral, but they would be an advanced American strategic base.

The question which is troubling many here in Washington is how much of all this will have to be renounced, or written off, if there is a Japanese peace treaty.

Before this question can be answered, we must ask ourselves whether in fact it is true that our occupation of Japan is, in case of war, the strategic asset it is commonly assumed to be. For, if Japan is to be regarded as an important American naval and air base, then we are committed in case of war not only to defend but also to feed the 80 million people of Japan.

IT IS over 4000 miles by sea from San Francisco to Yokohama, and the last part of the voyage brings ships within plane and submarine range of Soviet Siberia and Red China. In the last war we had the task of helping to supply the British Isles. They have half the population of the Japanese islands and they are about half as far away from continental United States. Moreover, Britain herself, unlike Japan, had a great merchant fleet and a great navy. She had the use also of the merchant shipping of the leading maritime countries of Europe. Yet the battle of the Atlantic was a tremendous strain upon the United States.

Therefore the commitment to feed Japan in time of war is one which should not be casually and lightly undertaken. It is one, in view of our commitments to Europe, which it might be too difficult to carry out.

THE COMMITMENT to defend Japan is a very great military undertaking, not to be entered into without thorough examination. This is the age of atomic warfare. If Japan is to be an advanced American base for the atomic bombardment of the Soviet Union, then—obviously—Japan must become a prime target of atomic bombardment by the Soviet Union.

General Vandenberg is insisting that the United States is undefended against atomic bombardment. Just how, we had better ask ourselves, do we propose to defend Tokyo and Yokohama, Nagoya and Kobe, Hiroshima and Nagasaki? Have we a right to commit the disarmed and undefended Japanese to the certainty of direct involvement in case of war? And is it a sound strategical deployment of American military resources, is it a reasonably calculated risk, to put any important American force in such an exposed position? Is this not to invite once more and on a greater scale the tragedy of Bataan?

THESE considerations place the decisions we have to make about Japan in a somewhat different perspective. It is still an important, a vital American interest, that Japan should not be captured internally by the Communists or conquered by the Soviet Union. But it is not an American interest to undertake the defense and the supply of Japan in case of war: it is not, therefore, an American interest to continue to occupy Japan or to occupy "bases" within the national territory of Japan. It is in fact an American interest to be relieved of the commitment, which occupation or "bases" involve, to defend and supply Japan.

NOW as respects Japanese security against internal communism, the obvious measure is to help the Japanese government to set up a reliable police force and a coast guard before the American occupation withdraws. The island structure of Japan should lend itself, given an adequate maritime police, to internal security against local insurrection and against infiltration from across the national frontiers.

That leaves the problem of external aggression, which could theoretically take the form of an amphibious conquest or of atomic bombardment. Amphibious conquest was not an attractive idea to us when we were about to undertake it in 1945. It will be no less unattractive to the Russians if, as we should, we give the Japanese access to the modern defensive weapons.

THE THREAT of atomic bombardment presents a more difficult problem. In working out the solution, we have to begin by recognizing that the forces we now have in Japan, or could or would put there in time of war, are not a defense against atomic bombardment. The protection we give to Japan against atomic bombardment and as a matter of fact against amphibious conquest as well, is not an actual defense if the Soviet Union chose to strike. It is a guarantee that we shall go to war automatically if Japan is attacked. The guarantee is automatic while American troops are in Japan. The automatic guarantee, which is backed by the total power of the United States, is the defense of Japan. As long as Japan is totally or even partially disarmed the ultimate defense of Japan can rest on nothing but the guarantee of the United States.

The Americans in Japan do not in fact make Japan invulnerable. What they do is to make the guarantee effective, and the guarantee, we hope and believe, will deter the Soviet Union from committing its own forces overtly to war.

IN THE last analysis, therefore, the problem of a Japanese peace treaty is how, without the actual presence of American soldiers on Japanese territory, a guarantee can be provided which is approximately as automatic and approximately as credible and as deterrent as the guarantee which rests now upon the presence of General MacArthur and his troops.

It should not be beyond the resources of diplomacy and the wit of man to devise such a guarantee of the territorial integrity and the independence of Japan. For it will long continue to be a vital interest both of the Japanese nation and of the American that this guarantee should be respected.

Anti-Semitic Vandals' Punishment Is Ordered

Berlin, June 11 (AP). — Mayor Friedrich Ebert ordered the East Berlin public prosecutor today to punish acts of vandalism against Jewish cemeteries "with the full force of the law."

He also sent a letter of regret to the Jewish community for recent incidents in which Jewish gravestones were overturned and defaced in the Soviet sector.

The mayor claimed "criminal elements" in East Berlin had been "encouraged by the open toleration of anti-Semitic behavior in West Germany."

A Communication

Why France Fell— Last-War Thinking

By Raymond Cartier

Paris Newsmagazine Match Correspondent

AS AN officer in the French General Staff, in 1939-40, I happened to have an inside view of the events which led to the destruction of the French Army. Later, during the Nuernberg trial, I got an opportunity for studying the German High Command archives taken by the British at Flensburg. From these different and opposite observations, I hope I obtained an accurate notion of the background of the French defeat, which is still today not clearly understood by many.

Such an understanding is not merely a question of historical interest. The reasons why France was so desperately beaten belong to the general causes which endanger any nation after a successful war. Military experts have demonstrated, for instance, that the German strategists lost the 1914 campaign, and consequently the First World War, in carrying out the very principles which gave victory to Prussia in 1870. The French, 25 years after 1918, were to experience the same destiny.

It is devoid of any signification to ascribe the French defeat to treason, internal weakness, wrong political leadership and the like. The main reason was technical. France was technically beaten on the battlefield by an army, or more exactly by a fraction of an army, which embodied a revolutionary concept of war and which was by itself the product of a military revolution. Against this quite unexpected display, France exhibited an army which had stopped thinking in 1918 and which relied only on its old formula for victory.

IN MY own section of the General Staff (Intelligence), we caught our first sight of the new German military power through the war in Poland, in the fall of 1939. We were not lacking in information about the operations and we found ourselves drawing a sketch of the army that was soon to assail us. For myself, the picture was illuminating. It gave me a key for the understanding of subsequent developments, including the apparently amazing course of the war in Russia, months later.

The picture was roughly as follows:

"1. There is not one German army, but two. Each is quite different from the other in regard to organization, armament, tactical and strategical possibilities, etc. They do not operate in liasion with each other. Each fights independently, according to its own pace and power.

"2. One of these armies is rather poor. It consists of divisions built up to the pattern of 1918 infantry-artillery divisions. They suffer evidently from the shortcomings of improvisation. Their motorization is in its infancy. They lack able officers and NCOs, and the training of the rank-and-file is less than medium. This army is in any case a match for the French army.

"3. The other German army is a highly efficient instrument of war. It consists of a handful of armored and motorized divisions which fight with close support by powerful aviation. It includes only a small part of Germany's manpower, but has the greatest part of Germany's striking capacity. It combines strength and rapidity, and therefore has regained the ability to maneuver that modern armies seems to have lost since almost 30 years ago."

SUCH a view being firmly established in my mind, it became evident that France's fate was militarily sealed. We had nothing matching the German corps de bataille—i.e., Army No. 2—and, above all, we were not ready for the kind of quick war it rendered possible again. To me and to a few of my comrades—I dare say to some French generals as well—the events of May, 1940, didn't fall from heaven like unexpected and incomprehensible blows. They were normal consequences of the basic differences between the French and the German armies, and it was almost as impossible for the former to win the war as it would be for a predreadnaught period battleship to sink the Big Mo.

From a cold logical point of view, fighting in 1940 was useless, and without any significance. The French army fought all the same, losing almost 150,000 killed in six weeks, but its miserable accomplisments gave rise abroad and at home to the lasting idea that the French soldier had given way everywhere without trying to hold the ground.

THE GREATEST misinterpretation about the fall of France would be to imagine that the French were overwhelmed by an enemy numerically stronger. We never had such an illusion. Even in May, 1940, while the battle was rolling on, we were quite aware of the forces which were crushing our troops.

We had identified every armored and motorized German division and we knwe positively that a gap wsa widening between them and the slow-following foot divisions. When Guderian's tanks reached the Channel (encircling the Franco-British First Army Group), the latter were just at the Sambre River, about five marches behind. A desert stretched between the two German armies, and we knew it.

But the defensive pattern of the French army was so strong and so rigid that it was out of the question to launch a counter-offensive against the long and unprotected flank of the German onslaught. Besides, 12 or 13 of our best divisions were idle under the pompous concrete of the Maginot Line and they could not be removed to take part in the mobile battle because, being "fortress units," they had no heavy armament of their own and were not provided with means of transportation of any kind.

IT IS easy to tally the German units which fought effectively in the battle of May. The roll is as follows:

Ten Panzer (armored) divisions. No more than seven of these were complete, the other numbering 250 tanks instead of the regular 400. At least two, perhaps three, were equipped with Skoda tanks, of French design, which had been taken by the Nazis in Szechoslovakia and reissued to their army.

Four motorized infantry divisions belonging to the army and two other motorized divisions belonging to the SS Corps.

Parts of active infantry divisions. They were engaged in Belgium and around Dunkirk when the Franco-British resistance stiffened in order to cover the evacuation by sea. They fought, as a rule, just for a few days.

The Iuftwaffe (aviation).

In terms of man-strength, the gross total of the above formations amounts barely to two hundred thousand. They succeeded in destroying as many as 60 French, British, Belgian and Dutch divisions, in taking more than a million prisoners and in breaking the backbone of the French army. The battle of June, on the Somme and Aisne rivers, was a fight without hope which was practically over in a matter of two days.

IT IS generally taken for granted that the Germans were immensely superior in the number and quality of their tanks. But this assertion, given as an explanation of the French defeat, is another misinterpretation of the facts. Actually the number of tanks was about even between the two armies.

Some French types were obsolete, but on the other hand many German Panzerwagen were very light and would not be classified as tanks in the French army. The French heavy tanks—especially Somua and Mark B. makes,were generally stronger, more powerful and more carefully built than their German opposite numbers. As a rule, and wit ha full exception for the air force—planes factories had been nationalized shortly before the war—the inferiority in armament does not stand as a satisfactorily explanation for the French rout.

No more does the lack of financial sacrifices from the French people or the unwillingness of the Parliament in appropriating funds for national defense. If you would pile up all the sums which were devoted to defense from 1918 to 1940, you would come to a total dwarfing of the German miltary expenditures during the same period. The German victory over France was paid at the lowest rate, in money as well as in men.

IT IS painful to some Frenchmen to recognize that they were beaten primarily by the power of brains. They would prefer to ascribe their national disaster of 10 years ago to a superior physical strength. They confess readily that France was undermined by a bad political system and they are almost glad to refer to the seeds of treason artfully planted by nazism into French soil. But to admit that stupidity was the reason for defeat, that the famed brightness of the French mind was obliterated, that the French military "elite" was unable to understand the changing form of warfare and to conceive accordingly a new doctrine of war, deeply hurts the national pride.

In some sense, such a feeling is understandable. The 1940 defeat is hardly to be forgiven. It was not in the power of France to turn out as much steel as Germany or to call as many men to the colors, but it was in her power to build up an army as modern, as mobile, as offensive-fitted and as offensive-minded as Germany's.

Before 1940, in the French military academies, it was a rule and almost a rite to invoke in any circumstance the "lessons of the war"—meaning, of course, the 1914-18 war, which was looked upon as if it had been the only one in history. All the French military system, including the really ridiculous Maginot Line, was drawn up according to that alleged teaching. That blind obedience to the past led the French army directly to disaster. Nothing is more dangerous to a nation than a previous victory.

KNOW YOUR WATERWAYS

A Widespread Misconception

Year after year the Civil Functions Appropriation Act is widely referred to in the press and elsewhere as the River and Harbor Bill, and often as the "Pork Barrel" Bill. The first designation is grossly incorrect; the second is either ignorant or malicious misrepresentation. Waterway projects are initiated by local interests which believe that their communities will benefit from them: Local benefits add up to national benefits.

For the ten fiscal years ending on June 30, 1950, the Civil Functions Appropriation Acts total $3,209,636,115; $1,798,156,850, or approximately 56 per cent, is for the prevention of flood damage; $929,211,290, or approximately 29 per cent, is for rivers and harbors. This 29 per cent provides not only for New and Maintenance Work but also for Planning; Operation and Care of existing facilities; Examinations, Surveys and Contingencies; Prevention of deposits in New York Harbor; Salaries of the office of the Chief of Engineers; River and Harbor Board Expense; Beach Erosion Board Expense; and some smaller miscellaneous items. The remaining 15 per cent provides for the Quartermaster Corps; Federal Water Mains; United States Soldiers' Home; Maintenance and Operation of the Panama Canal, Sanitation and Civil Government there, and the Panama Railroad Co.; and other smaller items.

No other federal appropriation is more misrepresented or less understood than that for channel and harbor improvements; no other adds more to the welfare of the Nation.

With Shirley Povich

TOHEAR THEM tell it, major league pitchers can feel the pulsating beat of that rabbit's heart when they grip a baseball these days and the evidence is they aren't overdrawing it much.

They've been taking a fearful beating from the hitters all season, and if it isn't a lively ball they're throwing then the conclusion must be they are a sorry lot of pitchers.

winding it tighter."

The seven and eight-run innings have been a commonplace in the American League particularly, and never has there been such a batting binge. The Red Sox have five men hitting .340 or better. Al Rosen, Cleveland rookie, who hit only 14 homers in the Coast League last year, has already bashed 14 against A. L. pitching.

Clark Griffith, who used to be a pitcher himself, is saddened by the low character of the pitching business, and doesn't blame it all on the lively ball, though he concedes "it's full of jackrabbit. They're

GRIFFITH PREFERS to blame most of their troubles on the pitchers themselves. "There used to be more good pitchers around," he says. "Now most of 'em are throwing instead of pitching. A lot of the good ones are passing out. You don't get any more of those great games from Bob Feller, and you wouldn't call any of the Yankee pitchers great ones."

The steepest fall from grace, however, is that of Ellis Kinder of the Red Sox, who won 23 games, lost only five last season. In the first two months of this season. He's already lost six, won only three. He's one of the reasons the Red Sox, with an incredible team batting average of .315 are laboring in third place.

It's the Red Sox who point up best what has been happening to the league's pitchers, including their own. In their last nine games as the week ended, they averaged 16 runs. In three of those games, they scored 17, 20 and 29 runs. And they've been beaten by scores of 18-8 and 12-7. Fenway Park is renowed for its short left field fence, but never was the carnage so great.

THERE'S A hard-to-resist temptation to discount those Red Sox batting averages as phony, though. They're hitting closer to .400 and .315 in Fenway Park, when their lapses on the road are reckoned. They play their own left field fence for all it is worth, and only the averages of such left handed hitters as Ted Williams and Al Zarilla stand up to a true light.

Williams and Zarilla have it tough in their own park where the right field distances are not only respectable, but rough. Such as Walt Dropo, Bobby Doerr, Vern Stephens and Birdie Tebbetts, have their swings geared to the left field wall which invites extra-base hits in the form of 285-foot pop flies. Certain Fenway Park home runs are easy outs all over the rest of the world.

That Boston pitchers have been pitching and ducking in the same motion is quite evident, though. One of the interesting statistics as the week ended was the fact that the Red Sox had scored exactly twice as many runs as Washington this year, yet were only 5½ games ahead of the Nats. It's an indictment of what has been happening to the Boston pitchers.

THE POOR PITCHING profession has been getting no breaks at all, though. On top of the jackrabbit ball that has been leaping off bats like meteors, the pitchers have been saddled by the new and senseless balk rule that compounds their troubles. It could be an honest clue to some of the stuff that has been happening.

The pitchers are now carrying a mental hazard to the mound with them, aware that they must come to a full, one-second stop before delivering the pitch with men on bases. For a lot of 'em, it's tough to pitch without a wind-up anyway, and with men on bases the balk rule deprives 'em of some of their stuff.

Under the old rule, they merely had to come to a stop momentarily. They had so many balks called early in the season they were shocked into a state of nerves. And at a time when they already had plenty to be nervous about—their own doubtful ability, and the hopped-up thing they are throwing.

Scratch Wins Derby

Paris, June 11 (AP).—Marcel Boussac's Scratch today won the French Derby, classic race for 3-year-olds, at Chantilly.

Dodgers Split With Reds

Cincinnati, June 11 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds scored six runs in the seventh inning today, enabling them to shrug off a grand-slam home run by Roy Campanella of the Brooklyn Dodgers in the next frame and win the double-header finale, 8-5.

Campanella also clouted a two-run four-master in the opener, the Dodgers winning 5-4.

Duke Snider slashed a homer for the Brooks in the first of the nightcap, but three singles and a Brooklyn error put the Reds ahead 2-1 in the third.

Tigers Take 2, Wertz Homers In 14th to Win

Boston, June 11 (AP).—Vic Wertz, who hadn't had a hit in 10 previous times at bat, poled a three-run homer in the fourteenth inning for the winning margin in the second game today as the league-leading Detroit Tigers twice whipped Boston's Red Sox, 6-2 and 9-6.

The Detroiters and the Sox had been deadlocked at 6-6 from the seventh inning until Wertz broke up the second game with his eighth homer of the year. A paid crowd of 34,906, many of whom remained until the end, saw Southpaw Ted Gray pitch nine innings of four-hit ball to gain credit for the second game.

Lefty Hal Newhouser won his fifth decision of the season in the opener. The Tigers smashed across three runs in the ninth to cement the triumph.

Aaron Robinson slugged his sixth homer of the season for the Tigers in the seventh. The loss was the fourth for Righthander Joe Dobson, who has won seven games.

The Sox now have lost four in succession.

Hoot Evers belted his eighth homer of the season in th eseventh inning of the closer to give the Tigers a short-lived 6-5 lead which the Sox broke in their seventh when Johny Pesky was safe on an error and came around on Ted Williams' double and a force play.

Fazio Gallery Favorite at Open

Ardmore, June 11.—George Fazio, of the Woodmont Country Club, Washington, D. C., was a big gallery favorite in the National Open golf championship playoff today.

He used to operate driving ranges in the Philadelphia area.

One woman spectator remarked to her husband and son: "I'm pulling for Fazio to win because I'm an American, and because he appeals to me like a shoe-shine boy and I want him to get a break."

A man in the gallery said: "I'm for Fazio because he once gave me an extra bucket of balls at his driving range. He's just naturally a nice guy."

Yanks Trip Browns, 1-0, 4-2

New York, June 11 (AP).—Fred Sanford turned in his fourth victory without a loss today as he pitched the New York Yankees to a 4-2 victory over the St. Louis Browns in the second half of a double-header.

Sanford allowed only four hits and fanned nine. The Yanks also won the opener, 1-0, behind the three-hit pitching of Vic Raschi.

Raschi fanned six in the opener.

The Yanks scored the only run of the game in the third inning when Cliff Mapes doubled and Hank Bauer singled with two out off Stubby Overmire.

The twin-success capped a home stand in which the champions won ten of fifteen games.

Sanford outdueled righthander Al Widmar in the best game he has hurled in his spotty career as a Yankee. The shutout was the first for Raschi, who has taken seven of ten decisions. Stubby Ocermire was the loser.

All four pitchers went the route.

Kramer Upset By Segura

Cleveland, June 11 (AP).—Pancho Segura of Ecuador scored a surprising upset victory over Jack Kramer of Los Angeles today to advance into the finals of the National Professional tennis tournament.

Segura chopped the 1948 National champion down by 6-4, 8-10, 1-6, 6-4, 6-3 in the marathon contest.

Te will meet Frank Kovacs of Oakland, Calif., tomorrow in the finals.

rules. They penalized him two strokes for lifting and cleaning his ball.

What the man in the gallery, paying $3 to see the match, could not understand was why Mangum was penalized for doing what all three players apparently had done all afternoon.

They had lifted their balls, but that was merely to mark them—not to clean them; not to blow off a bug.

On the 230-yard seventeenth, Hogan knocked in a putt from the front edge of the green—a 45-footer—for a birdie 2, and played the 458-yard eighteenth easily for his par 4, subpar 69 and the championship. In the locker room later, Mangrum was philosophical.

"I didn't protest the ruling," he said. "But I did ask the officials for an explanation. No, I didn't think it was a penalty or I wouldn't have done it although I know that normally the only time you lift your ball is at your opponent's request. "Anyway, it ain't my life, and I'll still win a lot of golf tournaments."

"Biggest Thrill," Says Hogan

Hogan came into press headquarters an hour later and said that he "sort of flinched" when Mangrum picked up his ball. Ben said there are a lot of rules he doesn't know but he sensed that Mangrum had done something wrong.

"Biggest kick I ever got out of winning a title, including the Open in Los Angeles n '198," he said of today's victory.

A bystander remarked: "Ths caps everything for you, Ben. Puts you back on top as the greatest of golfers with the greatest comeback in the history of sports."

Hogan merely grinned, but it was the most natural grin that ever creased the pan of the little Texan.

His next start will be in the Gooidall round-robn tournament. Thereafter he will pick his spots, will pass up the PGA this year, may not play in the Open next year.

"I'll never play 36 holes again in one day, the way I feel now," he said.

Ben Has Only 1 Bad Hole

When the technicality bobbed up on the 16th, Hogan was 1 up on Mangraum and Fazio was still hanging on.

Over the first nine holes, Hogan and Mangrum matched stroke for stroke, each picking up one birdie and each slipping over par once.

Hogan hit his only poor shot of the day on the eighth, pushing his drive into a trap, which cost him a stroke. Mangraum went over on the par 3 third, which he three putted.

Fazio, meanwhile, was chipping and putting like a champion. He had five one-putt greens going out, and picked up birdies on the second and eighth. He was over the green on the first, over again and into a trap on the sixth and drove out of bounds on the seventh for bogeys on those holes.

As they turned into the second nine, Hogan was so accurate that he hit every green in regulation, putted for birdie after birdie, yet did not sink one until the 45-footer on the seventeenth.

Fazio 3-Putts Fourteenth

Mangrum grew a little wild on the second nine, going over on the tenth, twelfth, and fourteenth, but he canned a six-footer on the eleventh and a 13-footer on the fifteenth for birds to stay within a stroke of Hogan until the technically spoiled things.

Fazio started back in good shape with four straight pars, but he three-putted the fourteenth green and that seemed to upset him. He also went 5-5, bogey-bogey on the next two holes, took another 5 on the finishing hole and closed with 75, five over par.

Woodmont Boys Cheer Fazio

Ardmore, June 11.—Members of George Fazio's home course, Woodmont Country Club, in Washington, D. C., were in the gallery today pulling for him in the National Open playoff.

Arthur Sundlun, president of Woodmont, led a large contingent of Fazio fans from Woodmont. Others included Ed Wortman, Bob Philipson, Cab Feldman, Sam Schwartz, Bob Cramer, Mel Lewis, Len Jacobs, Phil Rosenfeld and Jimmie Simon.

After the match, Simon announced that the club will hold a reception Tuesday night for Fazio.

Cards Slap Giants Twice

St. Louis, June 11 (AP).—The league-leading St. Louis Cardinals blasted the New York Giants 6-1 and 5-2 today before 33,853 fans, the largest crowd at Sportsman's Park in nearly four years.

The Cardinals now have won five straight and 13 of thei rlast 16 contests. It was the tenth straight triumph for them over Leo Durocher's Giants.

Jack Kramer, starting for New York in the second game, was knocked out when the Cardinals scored all of their five runs in the fifth. In the big round Stan Musial tripled, Eddie Miller and Del Rice doubled, and Enos Slaughter and Red Schoendienst singled. Miller ha dtwo other doubles in the game. Howard Pollet pitched seven-hit

Greenock Wins, 3-0; Ties for 2d Place

Sam Norfolk's four-hitter against Cedar Grove moved Greenock into a second-place tie in the Southern Maryland league yesterday. Greenock shut out Cedar Grove, 3-0.

With the loop leaders, St. Leonard's, idle, Prince Frederick missed a chance to gain ground as it lost, 15-5, to Solomon's. Davisonville trimmed Owings, 8-3, and Calvert Independents beat Avalon, 7-5, in other league contests.

Cissel-Saxon Wins

Indianhead, Md., June 11.—The Cissel-Saxon post of Silver Spring defeated Indianhead, 14-5, in a Maryland State Junior American League game here this afternoon. It was the third victory in a row for Cissel-Saxon.

DeWitt Crosley hit a home run with two men on for the victors.

Game Called: Runs

The utter hopelessness of it all suddenly struck the Cabin John baseball team yesterday.

Leading by a dozen runs, the 17-and-under Woodacre Pirates put in 12-year-old Pitcher Johnny Dike in the sixth inning. Johnny hurled no-hit ball for three innings; meanwhile the Pirates, with a 10-run seventh, mounted to a 24-0 bulge.

Both teams called off the ninth inning by mutual consent.

Griffs Lose 1st of Year To Chicago In Opener

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Chicago White Sox let fly with their Sunday punch all the way from last place yesterday and happily broke their losing streak against the Nats—a compound fracture.

Before 13,946 doleful Griffith Stadium fans, the Sox licked the Nats in the first game of a double header, 8-3, and then made it unanimous with a 5-4 victory in the second game.

They were turning on their tormentors who had whipped 'em seven straight times this year before yesterday, and they rubbed it in sort of gleefully in that second game which was a triumph for Ray Scarborough over his erstwhile Washington pals.

Nagy Victim in Opener

They sprinted into a 4-0 lead against Steve Nagy in the first game, with the help of some sorry misplays by the Nats, and won that one in a breeze. The winning pitcher was Rookie Ken Holcombe, right hander from Sacramento, who won his first major league victory only last week.

Scarborough had only one rough inning—the third—in his game. After that, the ex-Nat was getting two quick strikes on everybody, and shutting the Nats out from the third to the ninth, when they came up with one useless run.

For the White Sox, it was complete revenge in that they licked Lloyd Hittle in the second game. That young man had been carving a career for himself and making a nice living beating the White Sox. But they caught up with him in five innings.

They set Scarborough up in a 2-0 lead in the first two innings. Dente's two-base wild throw on Carrasquel's infield single set up a run in the first inning and Zernial got it home with a single to right. Hittle invited their run in the second inning. He dropped a throw from Noren on Robinson's grounder, and Eddie Malone followed with a double to right.

Nats Take 3-2 Lead

The Nats suddenly bolted into a 3-2 lead in the third, though. Yost and Stewart doubled and Michaels singled in succession. Mele singled through the box for the second run, and Scarborough forced across the third with walks to Ostrowski and Dente.

And then in the fifth, the Sox won the ball game. Fox opened up with a single, and Hittle messed up Scarborough's bunt which went as a hit. Carrasquel's sacrifice and Philley's single to left got two runs home, and Majeski scored Philley with a single to right.

Mickey Harris took charge in the sixth and blanked the Sox with one hit for the rest of the game, only one man reaching base, but Scarborough wasn't letting his lead get away.

There was a slight flurry of trouble for him in the ninth when Evans led off with a single. But pinch hitter Sherry Robertson flied out, and Majeski made a super play on Yost's grounder. Stewart singled to get Evans home, but Michaels didn't do anything of importance and the Sox had the ball game.

Nagy Loss Rough 1st Inning

Nagy's rough first inning doomed the Nats in the opening game. He was a victim of his own wildness, some shoddy support and a couple of tainted hits as the White Sox sprinted into a 4-0 lead.

Kiner's 13th Homer Breaks Up Nightcap

Phils Lose, 5-4, After 7-6 Victory

Pittsburgh, June 11 (AP).—Ralph Kiner's thirteenth home run—his second of the day—broke up a 4-4 tie in the twelfth inning of the nightcap today to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 5-4 edge over Philadelphia.

The 33,217 fans saw the Phillies come from behind in the eighth inning of the first game to take a 7-6 win.

Del Ennis slapped his tenth and eleventh, one in each contest, for Philadelphia. Willie Jones clouted his ninth in the nightcap for the losers.

The Phillies splurged for five runs in the eighth inning of the opener to spoil a Pittsburgh 4-2 lead, then went on to squeeze out a ninth-inning Buc rally and register the victory.

The Phils tabbed their initial markers on Del Ennis' tenth homer with one aboard in the fourth.

Ralph Kiner hit his twelfth for the Bucs in the sixth with two on. Rookie Vernon Law went the distance in his first mound appearance for the Pirates, allowing nine hits. The Phils' Robin Roberts was lifted for a pinch-hitter after Kiner hit his four-bagger.

Mueller Injured By Pitched Ball

Pittsburgh, June 11 (AP).—Pittsburgh Catcher Ray Mueller, 38-year-old big league veteran, was struck by a pitched ball while batting in the sixth inning of the second game today between the Pirates and the Philadelphia Phillies.

Bobby Miller, a lanky right-hander, was the pitcher.

Mueller was carried off the field on a stretcher. Dr. Charles Jorgensen, Pirate physician, said Mueller would be taken to a hospital after the game for X-rays. He said the former New York Giant backstop had regained consciousness after taken to the club house.

Braves Lose Twice to Cubs, 5-4, 2-1

Chicago, June 11 (AP). — The Chicago Cubs captured a double header from the Boston Braves today, winning the first game 5-4 in 10 innings and the second 2-1, before a crowd of 36,835.

It gave the Cubs a sweep of the three game series and enabled them to take over fourth place from the Braves.

The Cubs' Ron Northey gave Bob Rush the edge in a mound duel with Warren Spahn in the night cap when he slammed a homer for the divisive tally in the fourth inning.

In the opener, Hank Sauer knocked in four runs, including the winning oe in the tenth.

SAFE OR OUT?—Second Baseman Gene Mauch, of the Braves, seems to think he tagged Hank Sauer, of the Cubs, before the latter slid back into the base. On the other hand, Umpire Bill Stewart signals "safe" and that's the way it ended up, despite the look of disbelief on Mauch's face and a short argument which followed

5 Dissenting Clubs, Rumor Says

Chandler Reportedly Fails To Land 7-Year Contract

St. Louis, June 11 (AP).—An unconfirmed report that Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler demanded a new seven-year contract from the major leagues—and failed to get it—was published today by the Post-Dispatch.

"Baseball people won't talk about it," Sports Editor J. Roy Stockton of the newspaper wrote in his Sunday column. "Mention of the thing actually frightens them."

Stockton said that, according to the baseball "grapevine," Chandler failed to get the contract because five dissenting club owners believed the "commissioner's job was such a big one that it ought to seek the man, instead of the man campaigning for the job."

Stockton wrote:

"Pieced together, without the benefit of confirmation from any baseball men, here is what is said to have happened:

"Shortly before the December (major league) meeting, Commissioner Chandler is said to have issued a quasi-ultimatum to the major leagues. He asked for a new seven-year contract and wanted action immediately, because he 'had several other irons in the fire.'

"Before the league schedule meeting a special committee, representing both leagues, got together to consider Chandler's demands. The concensus was that the commissioner's demand, or request, was premature. The vote was close—11 to 5 for a new contract—but the five dissenters prevented Chandler from getting the requested new contract.

"He was informed that it was not customary to negotiate a new contract so early, and that the business would be taken up in due time and he would be notified of the two leagues' decision not less than a year before expiration of his present contract, and possibly 18 months before expiration."

At Chicago, Chandler said he knows nothing about the report. He said the contract, according to his understanding, could not be renewed until 18 months before it expires. It runs until July, 1952. Chandler was in Chicago to attend today's Cubs-Braves doubleheader.

"Another report was that a $15,000 increase in salary voted Chandler was a compromise to take the sting out of rejection of his request for an immediate new contract."

Miss Lindsay Wins Golf Title

Dallas, June 11 (AP).—Marjorie Lindsay of Decatur, Ill., won the women's trans-Mississippi golf tournament today with a 7 and 6 victory over Gracie Demoss of Corvallis, Ore.

Miss Lindsay shot four under par for the 30 holes played. She had a 4 up lead through the first 18 and closed out the match on No. 30 with an eight-foot putt for a birdie deuce, while Miss Demoss was even par three.

Miss Lindsay had lost in the finals of the trans-Miss. last year to Betsy Rawls of Austin, Tex.

She gave one of the finest demonstrations of driving ever seen by a woman playing the par 73, 5,856-yard Lakewood Country Club course.

On the third nine holes this afternoon—during which she increased her lead to six up—she shot a 33, which was four under women's par and three under men's par.

to invite trouble, and then staved it off for a bit by grabbing Masi's bunt for a force play at third. Trouble came though when Dente momentarily fumbled Zernial's grounder, precluding a double play.

Philley scored all the way from second as Dente was retiring Zernial at first. Then Eddie Robinson raised a short fly into right that raised hob with the Nats. Robertson and Michaels shooed each other off the ball and it dropped at their feet for a cheap double. Majeski was walked intentionally and Adams unintentionally, forcing in another run.

With the bases still filled Fox nubbed a fuzzy single into short left that was loaded with two more runs.

Nagy kept 'em in hand thereafter until the fifth when Masi whacked him for a single, Zernial walked, Robinson blazed a single past Noren, and Majeski banged a hard double to right. It added up to three runs and a 7-2 lead for the Sox at that point.

The Nats weren't damaging young Holcombe much meanwhile. Mickey Grasso led off with a triple to center in the third, and scored on Nagy's ground ball. With two out, Stewart tripled to right center and scored on Noren's single, but they could stir up only one run thereafter.

Noren doubled Yost home in the fifth with a smash against the right field wall, but in the last four innings Master Holcombe was giving up no runs at all.

IN SHORT—Outfielder Herb Adams played both games for the White Sox, blissfully unaware of the fact he had already been traded to Buffalo for Gerry Scala. . . . The infielders were having more trouble with the high sun than the outfielders in yesterday's first game. . . . The applause for Eddie Robinson in a White Sox uniform indicated he is still a Washington favorite. . . . But Ray Scarborough got the biggest hand when he went to the mound in the second game. . . . Noren was taking a brief Sunday afternoon nap when Philley scored from second base on a ground ball that Dente heaved to first. . . . General Manager Frank Lane of the Sox and Clark Griffith were huddled in more trade talk before the game. . . . The Nats bade farewell to Griffith Stadium until June 30. They shove off for St. Louis this afternoon for another tour of the West.

South May Follow Kentucky Formula

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

A 1950 Kentucky amendment to its school segregation law may set the pattern of Southern legislation to meet the latest Supreme Court rulings handed down a week ago today.

Chief Justice Vinson, a Kentuckian, was well aware of the action of his State's Legislature when he wrote the court's unanimous opinions in the Texas and Oklahoma University cases, The Washington Post has learned. Whether he felt his own State already had found a way out of the dilemma he posed for others of the 17 States that practice school segregation, along with the District, is something else again.

In the Texas and Oklahoma cases, the Supreme Court did not strike down "separate but equal" school facilities for whites and Negroes, but it insisted that "equal" be literally interpreted. Vinson's discussion of what factors go to make up "equal" facilities in Texas law school appeared to make it rather evident that the simplest way out would be to admit Negroes to most white State graduate schools.

Neither of the cases decided last Monday affects undergraduate colleges. Nor do they touch on segregation in grade or high schools. The Federal courts, however, already are considering other cases that do affect these schools and one or more such cases may get to the Supreme Court in the new term beginning in October.

But for the present, the problem is simply this: what shall the State universities which now segregate do when Negroes ask admission to graduate schools and where no "equal" facility is offered in an all-Negro school? In many cases no facility at all exists for Negroes.

An Associated Press survey yesterday showed there is no State-supported Negro medical school in the South and no Negro school offering a Ph.D. degree. About half the States have Negro law schools, including Texas, whose school was held to be something less than "equal" to that for whites. The cost of establishing Negro medical schools in 12 Southern States alone is estimated at about 144 million dollars by the Board of Control for Southern Region Education, the AP reported.

Hence the Kentucky situation may offer the way to meet the Supreme Court's rulings as far as graduate schools go. This is what happened in that State.

Last year a Federal court judge ordered the State to open the doors of the University of Kentucky for graduate and professional study in cases where the same courses were not offered at the Kentucky State College for Negroes. In other words, if "equal" facilities were not available—or at least comparable facilities—the Negro student must be admitted within the white institution.

The Kentucky Legislature this year amended the 1904 school segregation law to permit Negroes to attend any white institution of higher learning, public or private, under two conditions—if the institution's governing body approves or if comparable courses are not available at the State's Negro college.

The measure passed the State Senate, 23 to 3, and the State House of Representatives, 50 to 16. A similar amendment failed of passage in 1948, before the Federal court order.

So far, five Kentucky schools have taken advantage of the amendment — the University of Louisville, partly supported by municipal funds; Berea College, a private institution, and three Catholic colleges in Louisville; Nazareth and Ursuline colleges for women, and Bellarmine College for men. The latter will open this fall for the first time.

Berea, well known as a cooperative school where students work at dairy and other enterprises to pay their way, was itself the reason for the 1904 segregation law. From 1866 to 1904 it had admitted Negroes on the same basis as whites.

The University of Louisville this fall will admit graduate and professional Negro students and a year from this fall will admit Negroes to the entire school. This is being done under the new segregation law amendment.

The Catholic colleges took the position that they could admit Negroes to all their classes since each course includes religious training not offered at the State's Negro college.

As a result of the legislative action, college officials and lawyers in Kentucky—home State of two of the Supreme Court justices—feel they already are in tune with the latest court rulings.

The Associated Press survey, based on interviews with educators and other leaders, indicated that the color bar is likely to fall in graduate school education, by various forms of State action. The survey quoted "one of the region's (the South's) best qualified experts, who said he could not be quoted by name on such a controversial question" as saying:

"Segregation has a price tag. The South probably will buy all it can. But in the highest fields of education it just can't be bought."

41 Unanimous Decisions Among High Court's 107

In 107 cases decided in the 1949-50 Supreme Court term, 41 were decided unanimously.

In all but three, Chief Justice Vinson was with the majority. Justices Clark and Minton, the new appointees, disagreed with Vinson only two and six times, respectively.

Justice Black wrote the most dissents, 31, with 28 for Justice Frankfurter and 26 for Justice Jackson. Clark and Minton each wrote a dozen majority opinions, a high figure for new justices.

Leopold Reaches Rome For Audience With Pope

Rome, June 11 (AP).—Belgium's exiled King Leopold and his wife, the Princess de Rethy, arrived by train from Switzerland today.

The conservative newspaper Il Messaggero reported the purpose of their visit is a "strictly religious" audience with Pope Pius XII, probably Monday.

The paper scoffed at speculation in Belgian Catholic circles that Leopold would seek papal advice about his future. A new pro-Leopold government in Brussels is expected to try to recall him from exile soon by dissolving the regency of his brother, Prince Charles.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

Senators Expected To Kill House Rider Curbing Annual Leave

The Senate Appropriations Committee can be expected to kick out the House-approved rider to force Federal employes to take annual leave this year as they earn it or else lose it.

Legal experts have informed the committee that the rider wouldn't be upheld by the courts. They explained it conflicts with the law that allows employes to accumulate and carry-over annual leave from one year to another. Also, Budget Director Fred Lawton told the committee that the House rider would apply to military officers as well as civilian employes. He, too, doubted its legality.

Several Senators are reported to have suggested that the rider be amended to reduce annual and sick leave for most Federal workers. However, Chairman McKellar (D., Tenn.) and other members of his committee successfully opposed this approach when Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) attempted to tie his leave-cutting bill as a rider onto an appropriation bill several months ago. They still oppose it and no serious attempt to cut or restrict leave through the general appropriation bill is now expected.

The pressure was taken off the drive in Congress to either restrict or reduce leave when it was revealed here that the White House would issue a policy soon to "police" annual leave. In general, the Administration will direct employes to take leave as they earn it. Large leave carryovers will be discouraged.

In addition, the Senate committee is slated to reject the House-approved Jensen amendment. This rider would limit most Federal employes to the filling of one of every 10 vacated jobs. Several compromises have been suggested such as exempting employes in the first five grades where the turnover is greatest, and of allowing agencies to fill 90 percent of their vacant jobs. But as matters now stand, the amendment will be rejected completely.

As revealed here yesterday, the Senate committe is lining up behind its own economy plan—a proposal that would retain the effect of the job-and-budget cutting Taber-Thomas rider.

Taber-Thomas as approved by the House, would be amended and modified but it would still force a 600-million-dollar cut in the President's budget, and knock out an estimated 100,000 Federal jobs. Congress would specify cuts to be made under the Senate proposal which was drawn up jointly by the Appropriations Committee staff, General Accounting Office, and the Budget Bureau. The plan also has been cleared with several House leaders.

Meantime, there are conflicting reports as to when the Senate committee will act on the omnibus budget bill. That target date had been mid-July. However, Senate leaders are reported to be demanding earlier consideration of the budget. Several subcommittees have nearly completed their tasks of making up their bills, but nothing on them will be announced until the general bill is reported to the Senate.

JOB NEWS: Civil Service will launch a drive soon to recruit 300 teachers for Indian schools. The jobs pay $3100 a year. . . . About 1500 persons passed the recent tests for traffic and transportation specialists. . . . Only 72 passed the test for shorthand reporter. Nearly 700 failed it. Many of the competitors complained afterwards that they were unable to understand the dictation. . . . An exam is open for foreman of laborers, $1.14 an hour, and fuel yard foreman, $1.18 an hour.

FIGHT: AFL's American Federation of Government Employes has a delegation here to fight the layoff of 346 meat inspectors from the Agriculture Department. The inspectors were given provisional notice which will be withdrawn if the Senate restores the budget cut for the Bureau of Animal Industry voted by the House.

Day Care Work New Bill Will Seek to Extend

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

KIDS AT PLAY—The District's six day-care centers will close the end of this month unless Congress acts. Representative Walter K. Pastor Lauds Judge Cockrill For 'Discipline'

D. C. Juvenile Court Was Losing Respect, Dr. Rustin Declares

Judge Edith Cockrill of Juvenile Court, who has been criticized as being too severe with youthful offenders, yesterday was praised by a Methodist minister for recognizing that "this generation needs discipline."

Dr. Rustin

He was the Rev. Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw., who said he had seen "evidence that we need more discipline in Juvenile Court."

Two court aides, Miss Virginia Clary and Miss Clare Fagrie, resigned in the court row over the judge's policies in committing juveniles to correctional institutions.

Dr. Rustin said he was not attempting to defend Judge Cockrill, because she did not need that. He said he wanted her to know that he appreciated what she was trying to do. Later he said he was not going to be critical just because Judge Cockrill was trying to "put teeth" into operation of the court.

Among the city's young people, Dr. Rustin declared, there has arisen "a disrespect for Juvenile Court."

"That's a dangerous thing for a city," the clergyman asserted.

Mount Vernon Place Church, he explained, works extensively among downtown youngsters. Occasionally a child gets out of hand, attempts to disrupt the program and deface church property, he said.

When church officials talk to the children and tell them they may be turned over to Juvenile Court authorities, "they thumb their noses and say 'take me to Juvenile Court, it won't do anything.'" Dr. Rustin said.

Public officials need "help and sympathy rather than criticism," the clergyman said. He praised the "heroic, sacrificial service" given to the Nation by most of its public servants.

Dixiecrats Grow Weaker, Hill Says

Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), said yesterday the Dixiecrats are "getting weaker" in the South and predicted Democrats will keep control of the Senate in this fall's elections.

Appearing on a television show, Hill attributed decline of the Dixiecrats to racial and economic factors.

"On the whole, liberalism in the South is marching on," he said.

Referring to his own State, he said he didn't think the Alabama delegation would switch from the national Democratic presidential candidate as they did from Mr. Truman in 1948.

Adventurous Small Boys Set Off Burglar Alarm

Two adventurous boys, 9 and 10, set off a burglar alarm at the Charles Schwartz & Sons jewelry store, 708 7th st. nw., at 10 a. m., yesterday.

Police said the boys climbed to the roof and opened a skylight, tripping the alarm.

Policemen who responded in two scout cars scolded the boys and sent them home.

Cleric Calls For Dynamic Preaching

By Martha Hall
Post Reporter

"Dynamic, passionate, loving preaching of the Gospel in all the pulpits of the Christian church would change the world," the head of the Augustana Lutheran Church declared yesterday.

The Rev. Dr. P. O. Bersell, president of the denomination, issued the call for more effective preaching at ordination ceremonies for 17 men at the Washington Cathedral.

The service was the final event in the church's ninety-first annual convention, which opened Tuesday.

Dr. Bersell declared that one of America's greatest needs today is "a reassurance of pulpit power which will come only when we realize that the Gospel is . . . the truth of God."

"If you are the living voice of God," he said, "you can go forth in confidence and preach with authority and contribute in your ministry to the revival of faith and Chrstian life for which America is waiting."

Dr. Bersell criticized people who go to church "not to hear God speak but to hear a certain preacher," and judge the message on the "ablity of the preacher and not the authority of the word preached."

The men ordained to the ministry, none of whom was from Greater Washington, were all graduates of Augustana Lutheran Theological Seminary, Rock Island, Nebr.

Earlier in the day six women were consecrated deaconesses at a ceremony at Augustana Lutheran Church, New Hampshire ave. and V st. nw.

The Rev. Vernon Serenius, director of Immanuel Deaconess Institute, Omaha, Nebr., said that the women being consecrated were determined to "live out as really and truly as God will make it possible the precepts of their most holy faith."

"We are happy that the Evangelical diaconate is in the world as a witness that even in this day of much material emphasis and striving there are humble followers of Christ who are literally willing to 'forsake all and follow after'," he said.

District Bar Association To Honor Its Librarian

The Bar Association of the District of Columbia will honor Elphonzo W. Freeman, association librarian for 50 years, at its annual dinner meeting Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the Mayflower Hotel.

The association also will elect officers, using voting machines to tabulate returns. Voting will be from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. in the Bar Association Library in U. S. District Court Building, 5th and D sts. nw.

D. C. Parents' Problems Held More Acute

Study by Committee Cites Problems Here In Raising Family

Parental problems in the District are more acute than in other localities, according to the findings of a 20-member District committee for the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth.

In a report prepared to help lay the groundwork for the decennial nationwide conference opening here next December, the local committee cited a variety of factors which, it contends, confronts Washington parents with "unique" obstacles in their efforts to bring up their children.

To cope with the problems, parents here "seem called on to be better than average parents," the report asserts.

Prepared as a result of a six-month study by the entire committee and several subcommittees, the report charges inadequacies in programs for the care and treatment of children, health, recreation, education and general relief. As a result of the deficiencies, "family life and spiritual life for children and youth are adversely affected," it contends.

"Programs for the care and treatment of children are in general inadequate," according to the report. "There are inadequacies and inequities in education and recreation. Health services, instead of expanding comfortably with added needs, face possible curtailment."

Children in other localities develop healthy personalities far more readily than in "the unique community of Washington," the committee reported.

Other factors which impose abnormally heavy burdens on parents in Washington, according to the committee, are overcrowding and substandard housing for low-income groups; the "unnatural" importance to citizens of the Federal agencies here; "lack of roots" for a large segment of the population and "divided authority" between the local and Federal Governments in developing programs to meet community needs.

High Income Average

To help offset some of the problems, the committee found a high income average in the District and a relief load lower than any of the States. It also praised establishment last year of the United Community Services as a coordinating agency for planning community health, welfare and recreation.

Mrs. Henry Gichner is chairman of the local committee, set up last September by the commissioners at the request of Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing, chairman of the national committee.

EDITORIAL CONFERENCE—Publisher Randy Waller (left) talks over his weekly newspaper with Editor Allen Clarke (center) and Secretary Johnny Staunton

Meet Randy Waller, journalist, tennis champ, pianist, electrician and golf ball collector. But especially journalist.

Thirteen-year-old Ramond Randolph Waller, jr., of 1622 Ripon pl., Parkfairfax, Alexandria, Va., is the publisher of the Parkfairfax Weekly Journal, the first and only newspaper ever published in the community of some 1600 homes.

This is not the ordinary childish amateur publication. With 600 circulation, and selling for 3 cents a copy, Randy's paper has achieved professional status.

In an ordinary edition, the paper contains six 8x14-inch sheets, mimeographed on the St. Clement's Episcopal Church machine, in exchange for free advertising of all the social functions of the church.

Oh, yes, Randy has advertisers—eight of them, at $1 a half page, and $1.75 a full page.

The paper comes out only during the school year, the only time Randy can corral his 15-man staff, of which he is the oldest.

But in 12 weeks of operation last year, after a late start, the paper grossed nearly $100. After the overhead and reporter's wages were paid, Randy and his two schoolmate executives, Allen Clarke and Johnny Staunton, netted $60.16 to split between them.

Like many good newspapers, Randy's is a campaigner. He started a drive for a recreation hall for the youngsters of Parkfairfax, soliciting contributions from his readers. The children got the hall.

Besides his newspaper, Randy somehow finds time to be the Army Navy Country Club's boy's tennis champion, an accomplished piano player, an amateur electrician, and a B student at the St. Stephen's Episcopal School for Boys in Alexandria. His golf ball collection—16 in all—was acquired from celebrities at the recent Celebrities Tournament.

Woman Dies Of Burns After Fire in Home

District Police Blame Smoking for Death Of Miss Gilgallon, 29

A Washington woman died of burns in Casualty Hospital at 12:45 p. m. yesterday, almost seven hours after she was discovered—her clothes afire—in her Northeast apartment.

The dead woman was Miss Elizabeth Gilgallon, 29, of 1228 18th st. ne.

Firemen were summoned to the address by other residents about 6 a. m.

Pvt. Joseph I. Looney, 35, of No. 10 Engine Company, entered the smoke-filled living room and found a sofa and chair afire.

He said he went into the dining room where he found Miss Gilgallon in flames.

Looney carried Miss Gilgallon out of the apartment. He said the smoke in the partment forced him to put on a mask.

Casualty Hospital attaches said Miss Gilgallon suffered third-degree burns over 90 percent of her body.

Police believe she fell asleep on either the sofa or chair while smoking. The fire was confined to the furniture.

Miss Gilgallon shared the apartment with two other women, both of whom were away for the weekend, police said.

She is survived by a sister, Miss Ann Gilgallon of Scranton, Pa.

2 Housewives Off for Canada To Fly in Meet

Two District housewives, one the mother of three children and the other a college student, took off yesterday from National Airport for Montreal in a two-seater plane they will fly in an international air race this week.

Pilot of the team, which will compete in the Ninety Niners air race Wednesday from Montreal to West Palm Beach, is Mrs. Gretchen Tatelman, 20, wife of former Air Force Captain Victor W. Tatelman of 2321 Lincoln rd. ne.

No. 2 in the pair of housewives who think woman's place is in the air is Mrs. Sylvia Eisen, 30, wife of David T. Eisen, general contractor, of 6111 Eastern ave., Silver Spring.

Mrs. Eisen, who has three youngsters, is "going along for the ride" in the "Dirty Dora II," the Navion plane owned by the Tatelmans, and to provide company for Mrs. Tatelman on the 1436-mile race flight.

The fliers' husbands barred from participation in the race because they are men, and Mrs. Eisen's children, Carolyn Lynn, 10; Edmund, 9, and Stephen, 3, cheered the two women off at the airport and wished they could go with them.

Tatelman, a senior aeronautical engineering student at Catholic University, figures his wife will take about 9 hours and 2 minutes to fly the race distance. She's been flying since she was 15 and got her license at 16. She is majoring in French at George Washington University.

Woman Charged With Flying Saucer Attack

Jeanette Hartfield, 34, will appear in Municipal Court today on a charge of using a dangerous weapon against her aunt during a quarrel in Municipal Court today on a charge.

The "weapon," according to police, was a flying saucer.

Police said the Hartfield woman threw the saucer at her aunt, Mrs. Mattie Norman, at 218 Sullivan st. sw., Saturday night. Mrs. Norman was treated at Providence Hospital for scalp lacerations.

Mt. Rainier Man Killed, Two Injured In Auto Crash

Md. U. Electrician Is Fatally Hurt As Cars Collide; Traffic Toll Now 30

Traffic deaths to date..... 30
Deaths this time last year..... 30
Total traffic deaths 1950..... 71

A University of Maryland electrician was killed and two other Mount Rainier, Md., men were injured early yesterday in a two-car collision at Minnesota and Deane aves. ne.

The dead man is Joseph Andrew W. Glynn, 32, of 4212 31st st., Mount Rainier. He succumbed at 3:10 a. m.—a little more than two hours after the accident—at Casualty Hospital.

Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy District coroner, said death was due to multiple fractures and a ruptured spleen.

Glynn was a passenger in a car driven by Haskell Walter Todd, 35, of 3010 Arundel rd., Mt. Rainier.

Police said the vehicle overturned when it collided with a car driven by Homer Osborne Perkins, 24, of 144 Lynhaven dr., Alexandria. Perkins was released in $1500 bond after he was booked on colliding and the technical charge of hold-for-the-coroner.

Todd was treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts of the forehead and bruises of the knee and left elbow.

Frank J. McConaty, 39, of 3713 36th st., Mount Rainier, another passenger with Todd, suffered scalp lacerations and possible rib fractures. Treated at Casualty Hospital, he was transferred to Mount Alto Veterans Hospital, where his condition yesterday was reported good.

Glynn, a native of Washington, attended schools in Mt. Rainier. He served in the Air Forces during World War II, and had worked for the university for more than three years.

Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Clara E. Glynn, and three brothers, James J., John George, and Francis S. Glynn.

A requiem mass will be said at 9 a. m. Wednesday at the St. James Catholic Church, Mt. Rainier. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Harry Lee Simms, 24, of 4214 Nichols ave. sw., a circulation manager for The Washington Daily News, was in good condition at Providence Hospital yesterday despite head injuries.

Simms apparently was injured when his car was struck by an auto driven by George D. Russell, of 7200 14th ave., Takoma Park. The accident occurred at 2 p. m. Saturday at Mt. Pleasant and Irving sts. nw.

But, police said, several hours after the collision, Simms suddenly became ill and was taken to the hospital by his wife.

Two persons were injured at 10:35 p. m. Saturday when a Capital Transit Co. bus struck a pickup truck and a private auto on Route 202, Landover rd., near Cooper's la. in Prince Georges County.

The victims, taken to Prince Georges General Hospital, are Joan Walton, 17, of 7313 Forest rd., Kent Village, Md., a bus passenger, possible skull fracture, and Meredith E. Gibson, 41, of 819 Yuma st. ne., passenger in the truck, back injury.

The bus driver, Edward S. Wharton, 26, of 4108 Crittenden st., Hyattsville, was charged with reckless driving. A hearing will be held Thursday in the Hyattsville Police Court.

Police said Wharton's bus skidded to the left side of the road and struck the pickup truck, driven by Frederick R. Mills, 39, of 5817 Baltimore blvd., Riverdale, Md. It then struck an auto, driven by Joseph C. Carlton, 55, of 61 Hawaii ave. ne.

A Neat Trick, Too

Mosquito Weighing Serves a Purpose

Weighing mosquitoes may sound like a rather useless pastime. Weighing them before and after dinner (the mosquitoes' dinner, that is) may sound even sillier.

But to Dr. Levon A. Terzian of the Naval Medical Research Institute, weighing mosquitoes before and after their meals is an essential part of a serious and important experiment.

Dr. Terzian announced the other day that his research with mosquitoes indicates the use of certain sulfa drugs may make man more susceptible to further infections.

The research required, among other complicated doings, letting sulfa-fed mosquitoes bite malaria-infected chickens for 10 minutes. He did the same with mosquitoes, which didn't have the benefit of sulfa.

In order to make sure, for purposes of comparison, that the two groups of mosquitoes were getting the same amount of dinner, and thus the same number of malaria parasites, he had to weigh the skeeters before and after.

It's delicate and tedious work, weighing mosquitoes, but essentially simple, Dr. Terzian says:

"First," he explains casually, "we have to anesthetize them slightly." Just put the patient in a box, and a drop or two of chloroform near her will be enough to make her groggy so she won't fly away. (Only the females bite.)

When the skeeter keels over, she's had enough, and with a pair of tweezers you carefully place her on a set of chemist's scales. This instrument — called a keyboard type semi-micro balance—is so delicate it will weigh down to one one-hundredth of a milligram. (A milligram is one one-thousandth of a gram, and a gram is about 35/1000 of an ounce.)

The weighing process has to be fast, and has to be done under constant temperature and humidity, so the skeeter's losses of body fluids won't throw off the delicate weight comparisons.

What does a mosquito weigh? An average Aedes aegypti, the type Dr. Terzian has been using, weighs 2.33 milligrams before her meal and 4.58 milligrams after she puts the bite on the chicken, he reports. In other words, she drinks in just about her own weight in blood and some imbibe more than that.

Dr. Terzian, who has been using skeeters for experiments for some time, admits he gets bitten pretty frequently. He still regards the critters as admirable animals—for the purpose, that is.

Presbyterians View Activity in Japan

Massanetta Springs, Va., June 11 (AP).—The question of active participation by the Presbyterian Church, United States, in the International Christian University of Japan will come before the church's nintieth general assembly here Monday.

Overtures dealing with the university will reach the floor of the assembly through the report of the standing committee on the board of world missions.

East Hanover Presbytery asked the assembly to instruct the board of world missions to give further consideration to the project, with a "view of more active participation" by the church.

The board has declined to support the university and said it did not have funds available to make the $50,000 contribution requested of it.

The university idea originated within the Southern Presbyterian Church, growing out of a proposal made by the Rev. Dr. John Allen MacLean, moderator of the Synod of Virginia and pastor of the Ginter Park Presbyterian Church, Richmond, in East Hanover Presbytery.

Dr. MacLean suggested the Christians in America raise funds for the resotration of atom-bombed Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and from this developed the movement leading to the university project.

Ceremony Today

Postoffice Celebrates 150th Year

The 150th anniversary of the Post Office Department will be marked today at noon with a ceremony in the courtyard of the Postoffice Building, 12th st., between Pennsylvania and Constitution aves.

Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson will be the principal speaker. He will present to John R. Steelman, special assistant to the President, shets of special stamps commemorative of the occasion.

The new stamp depicts the White House and is issued in honor of the executive branch of the Federal Government. This is the second of several special issues arranged in connection with the Washington Sesquicentennial celebration.

Three hundred postmasters from Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia will be guests at the ceremony.

The Army Band will play. Mary Davenport, contralto, will be featured soloist.

Freeman on Education

Williamsburg, Va., June 11 (AP).—Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman said today that "there is no security for Virginia higher education other than coordination and correlation of the tax-supported schools."

"The supervision of all State-supported schools must be under one board," Dr. Freeman told the 325 graduates of the College of William and Mary. "That is the only way to obtain adequate funds."

Speaking at commencement exercises which marked the close of the 257th school year at William and Mary, the noted author and historian said he was "pessimistic about Virginia's future."

Falls From Truck, Dies

Berlin, Md., June 11 (AP).—William Davis Daniels, 43-year-old Berlin man, fell from the rear of a truck and was killed today.

Trooper J. P. Monaghan said Daniels was sitting in the rear of a truck operated by his brother-in-law, James Edward Gray, also of Berlin. Gray passed another vehicle and as he swung back into his lane, Daniels lost his balance and fell to the road.

He was pronounced dead on arrival at Peninsula General Hospital in Salisbury. The accident occurred on State route 376 east of Berlin.

U. of Va. Baccalaureate

Charlottesville, Va., June 11 (AP). University of Virginia graduates said their formal farewell today at class exercises after hearing the baccalaureate sermon preached by Joseph Sittler, jr., of the Chicago Theological Seminary.

Dr. Sittler said the ultimate and overreaching end of all education is dependent upon the reverent understanding of human life.

Flag Day Exercises Set for Wednesday; AFL Council to Sponsor Ceremony

The Washington Post

Audience sings "America" as flags wave in the breeze

The Government Employes' Council of the American Federation of Labor, in cooperation with the Sesquicentennial Commission, will sponsor public Flag Day exercises Wednesday at 3 p. m. at the Sylvan Theater.

Principal speaker will be Paul W. Griffith, Assistant Secretary of Defense and past national commander of the American Legion. Music will be provided by the Navy Band, with Ben Mitchell Morris as soloist, the Sesquicentennial chorus and the Newmarket (Ind.) High School band.

Also participating will be representatives of most District veterans and patriotic organizations, who will join in massing of the colors as a climax to the ceremony.

By a presidential directive, all Government employes who can be spared from their jobs will be given time off to attend the exercises.

The Washington Elks Lodge conducted its annual Flag Day service parade and ceremony at the Sylvan Theater. About 400 persons attended the exercises and heard an address by Brig. Gen. James H. O'Neill, deputy chief of Army chaplains.

Uniformed representatives of more than a dozen veterans organizations joined the Elks boys' band and officers of the lodge in the parade, and then participated in massing of the colors at the outdoor theater.

Tonight at 9 o'clock, the Alexandria Elks Lodge will conduct a Flag Day service as a feature of its regular meeting at the Elks' Hall, 318 Prince st.

Record Class Graduated at Gonzaga High

Gonzaga High School last night graduated the largest class in its 150-year history—130—four more than the previous record class graduated in 1948.

The diplomas were presented by the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, D. D., Auxiliary Bishop of Washington, and the principal address was by Shane McCarthy, Washington attorney.

The graduation folowed a morning baccalaureate mass in St. Aloysius Church, offered by the Rev. Neil J. Gargan, S. J., president of Gonzaga High School and rector of the church. The Rev. John B. Lanahan, S. J., professor at the school, gave the sermon.

Twenty-four seniors were graduated at De Matha Catholic High School, 4301 Madison st., Hyattsville, yesterday morning. The Very Rev. Donald Carroll, secretary to the Apostolic Delegate, delivered the principal address in the school auditorium and presented scholastic medals. The Rev. Paul Donovan, O. SS. T., head of the school, awarded the diplomas.

Thunderwater Is Dead; Indian Tribes' Leader

Cleveland, Ohio, June 10 (AP).—Chief Thunderwater, head of the Supreme Council of Indian Tribes in the United States and Canada, died here today.

The chief, whose name was Oghema Niagara, was 85 years old and his East Side cottage was considered the unofficial capitol of the surviving North American Indians.

Named for Niagara Falls, Chief Thunderwater was a regular participant in civic gatherings here and a constant spokesman for Indian affairs until his illness eight years ago.

During his active years he sold herbs and Indian medicines and received delegations each year from the various remaining tribes.

According to the best data available, Chief Thunderwater was born somewhere in New York State and became the hereditary chief of the Osankee Tribe.

He is survived by two granddaughters, Mahoniaee of Ceveland, and Mrs. Marian Palmer, Willoughby, Ohio.

He will be buried Tuesday in the old Erie Street Cemetery. He had vigorously opposed municipal plans for moving the cemetery because a loyal Indian who fought in the Black Hawk War is buried there.

William Luther Stom, Ex-Railroader, Is Dead

William Luther Stom, 76, retired Pennsylvania Railroad conductor, died Friday at his residence, 708 19th st. nw. He had been ill four days.

Mr. Stom was a native of Altoona, Pa., and came here in 1946. He was a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad for 42 years. He was a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics and the Independent Order of Red Men.

In addition to his widow, Mr. Stom is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Clark and Mrs. Natalie Rollason, both of Albuquerque, N. Mex.; two sisters, Mrs. Elsie Gearhart, Duncansville, Pa., and Mrs. Stella Shoenfeldt, Dallas, Tex.; and a brother, George H. Stom, Mackinaw, Mich.

Funeral services will be held at Joseph Gawler's and Son funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw., today at 2:30 p. m. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

SENATOR MARGARET CHASE SMITH (R., Me.), whose "Declaration of Conscience" caused a recent congressional sensation, is shown leaving the Savoy Hotel in Milan, Italy, accompanied by Mrs. Joel C. Hudson (right), wife of the United States Consul-General. Senator Smith stopped in Milan last week en route to a meeting of UNESCO in Florence. For a summary of the progress of "feminine" legislation in the current Congress, see story below

'Equal Rights' Sleeping, but:

Congress Keeps an Eye On the Female Vote

CONGRESS IS paying considerable attention to women's legislation—and to its 10 lady legislators—although it hasn't enacted any laws yet this session specifically for the fair sex, a Congressional Quarterly survey shows.

Some of the Congressmen apparently believe their action on bills affecting women may play a role in their political careers. Representatives Gordon L. McDonough (R., Calif.), for instance, warned in House debate against any further delay on the Senate-approved constitutional amendment providing equal rights for women. He declared:

"One who is opposed to equal rights for women is in as much political jeopardy today as he would have been had he opposed votes for women years ago."

Nevertheless, other members of Congress appeared willing to risk inaction on the bill, for it continued to lie untouched on the shelves of the House Judiciary Committee. But Representative Katherine St. George (R., N. Y.), one of the 10 women members of Congress, said she had 75 signatures on a discharge petition (218 are required to force House consideration).

Surprise Attack Brings Publicity

NEW ATTENTION was drawn indirectly to the matter when another Congressman, Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) figured prominently in the news with a surprise criticism of her colleagues—both Republicans and Democrats—for "irresponsible sensationalism" in connection with arguing disloyalty charges against the State Department.

Most newspapers displayed the story prominently and mention was made in some cases of the fact that Mrs. Smith was a leading supporter of the equal rights amendment when it passed the Senate in January this year.

House Took Action On Some Bills

WHILE the fate of this bill hangs in doubt, the House can point at least to action it has taken this year on the "equal rights" issue. It has passed and sent to the Senate:

1. A bill permitting women to serve as officers in the Army Medical Department; and

2. It inserted an amendment in the legislation establishing a voluntary Fair Employment Practices Commission, prohibiting discrimination because of sex.

Other bills, providing more equality and benefits before the law for women, meanwhile, are the subject of hearings before two House committees, though no final action is in sight. Here are their intents and purposes:

1. Equal pay for women doing work equal to that of men, provided in identical bills by Representatives Chase Going Woodhouse (D., Conn.) and Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.); hearings before a House Labor Subcommittee.

2. Uniform qualifications for Federal court jurors, provided in a bill by Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.); hearings before a House Judiciary Subcommittee.

Other Legislation Still in Doubt

OTHER legislation of interest to women on which no action of any kind has yet been taken would:

1. Prohibit both a husband and wife working for the Government if their combined income is $7500 or more, sponsored by Representative John Bell Williams (D., Miss.).

2. Raise the rank of the commandants of the Women's Armed Services from colonel and captain, respectively, to brigadier general and rear admiral, by Representative William L. Pfeiffer (R., N. Y.).

3. Permit the deduction for income tax purposes of housekeeping expenses of gainfully employed persons, by Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.).

4. Establish the women's reserve as a branch of the Coast Guard Reserve, by Representative Walter S. Baring (D., Nev.).

5. Provide veterans' benefits based on services for a member of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, identical bills by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.) and Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.).

Beef on Wing, Not Hoof, Stars at Party

By Elizabeth Maguire

NOTHING IS so rare as a day in June without a party. And yesterday was no exception. A garden party feted an engaged couple, and a Nevada round-up, given by Senator and Mrs. George W. Malone, proved one of the gayest events of the season.

In the latter gathering, which took place at the Bethesda home of Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Peter Miller, jr., were members from diplomatic, official and residential society. It was the annual picnic given by the Senator and his wife for their hosts of friends. The hours were from 3 to 6, and the menu included 2-inch steaks flown from their native Nevada.

Ambassador Leaving On Month's Vacation

THE AMBASSADOR of Uruguiy to the OAS and Senora de Mora are leaving Washington July 15th for Rehoboth Beach, and from there they will drive to Canada, returning to Washington about the middle of August.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Williams of Alexandria canceled the cocktail party they were to have given yesterday for Miss Joan Beauregard and her fiance, Richard P. Williams, as Mrs. Williams had a slight cold. The party will be given in July instead, when the bride and bridegroom have returned from their honeymoon. The wedding will take place Saturday, June 17.

Garden Party Honors Couple

A GARDEN cocktail party was given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Willmott Lewis, jr., for Miss Betsy Beach, pretty daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Beach, and her fiance, David Sterling, whose wedding will take place Monday, June 26, in St. Matthew's Cathedral.

In the cocktail gathering were Miss Grayson Beach, Miss Frederica Sterling, Miss Nancy Thomas, Miss Amie Willard and her fiance, George Ferris, and another engaged couple, Miss Agnes Dunn and Lawrence Dalley.

Others included Miss Barbara Barry, Miss Ruth Saul, Miss Betsy de Sibour, John Sterling, Peter Gilsey, Dick van Winkle, Hugh Auchincloss, Chauncey G. Parker, 3d, and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Brown.

Democratic Club Honored at Tea

MEMBERS OF the Democratic Club of the District of Columbia were honored yesterday at a tea given by the president of the club, Arthur Clarendon Smith, and Mrs. Smith at their home from 5 to 7 o'clock. Garden flowers filled the house and a buffet table in the garden was centered with tall red roses.

In the receiving line with Mr. and Mrs. Smith were officers of the club, Mrs. Estelle Whiting, Jack Evans, William Fadler, Reidar D. Claffy, Mrs. Gertrude Jay Scott, Mrs. Vivian House and Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the Secretary of the Interior. The latter is an honorary vice president.

Other honorary vice presidents of the Democratic Club of the District are the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Jesse Monroe Donaldson, the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Charles Sawyer, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John Snyder and the Assistant to the President and Mrs. John R. Steelman.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Dawson, Senator and Mrs. Clyde R. Hoey, Senator and Mrs. Hubert H. Humphrey, Senator and Mrs. Estes Kefauver, Representative and Mrs. Wayne N. Aspinall, Representative and Mrs. Olin E. Teague, Representative and Mrs. Harry R. Sheppard and Representative and Mrs. John Key were among other invited guests.

Sweden's Ambassador Honored at Reception

THE AMBASSADOR of Sweden and Mme. Boheman were honor guests yesterday at an informal reception held by the Institute on the Position of the United States in World Affairs.

Dr. James J. Robbins, now vice president of the University, who formerly was cultural attache of the United States embassy in Stockholm, introduced guests to Ambassador and Mrs. Boheman and Dr. Paul Douglas, president of the University. Others in the receiving line were Dr. Pittman B. Potter, dean of the graduate division of American University, and Mrs. Potter, Dr. Ernest Posner, director of the School of Social Science and Public Affairs; and Dr. Samuel E. Burr, director of the Institute on the Position of the United States in World Affairs, and Mrs. Burr.

Miss Wentworth Feted at Luncheon

MISS Lorraine Yvonne Wentworth, whose marriage to Roland Taylor of Washington, will take place Thursday, was entertained at a luncheon Saturday given by her maid of honor, Miss Carolyn Wendt, at her home in Kenwood.

Other parties for the popular bride-elect are a luncheon on Monday at which Mrs. Hurshel Underhill will be hostess at her home in Bethesda; and a reception and shower on Tuesday by Mrs. Kimber Vought of Philadelphia, who will be a bridesmaid.

Miss Joan Boyle will honor Miss Wentworth and Mr. Taylor at a garden buffet supper Monday evening.

Following the wedding rehearsal Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Robert Seager Thurston, uncle and aunt of Miss Wentworth, will entertain the bridal party at a buffet supper.

Guests at Miss Wendt's luncheon yesterday included Mrs. Drennan Heady, mother of the bride-to-be; Mrs. Paul C. L. Carr, mother of the prospective bridegroom; Miss Patricia Palmer, a bridesmaid; Miss Jean Hildreth, Miss Joan Boyle, Miss Natalie Hammacher, Miss Polly Norment, Mrs. Hugh Darling, a bridesmaid; Mrs. Justin O'Conor, Mrs. John C. Gibbons, a bridesmaid; and Mrs. Vought.

Berries Weight the Vine, Apples Swell on the Limb—But Paraffin Won't Stick to the Jelly Glass

Ask Anne

WITH berries already on the market and green apples growing bigger in the orchards, jelly-making season will soon be underway. Its approach brings this question from a reader:

DEAR ANNE:
Can you advise me why the paraffin I put on my jelly does not seal? After a week or two, it becomes loose and nothing I do after that will hold a seal. I have tried pouring the paraffin while the jelly it hot (as per instructions with commercial pectin) and when jelly is cold. I always use two layers, being sure the top of glass is clean. Perhaps you can advise me of some more adequate method of sealing. Mrs. L. R. Clements, Vienna, Va.

Have you tried tipping and rotating the glass as the paraffin cools? If this is done before the paraffin hardens, it will run up to the rim and form a good seal. Even though it shrinks a bit later, it should still adhere to the sides of the class.

It's important, too, of course, that the inside rim of the glass be clean, dry, and free from jelly drops. Wiping the inside rim with a cloth dipped in alcohol helps to insure a perfect seal.

DEAR ANNE:
Several pieces of my lovely and highly polished furniture have developed what appears to be a sort of haze over it in spots. How can I get rid of this "foggy" look and restore its beauty? W. G. G., Bethesda, Md.

Dampen a clean piece of cheesecloth with a solution made by mixing 1 quart of clear water and 1 tablespoon of vinegar. Apply it to the surface of the furniture, rubbing with the grain until the "fog" disappears. Let furniture dry thoroughly before repolishing in usual way.

DEAR ANNE:
Re: the recent exchange in your column about brown sugar: Just keep brown sugar in the bread box and bread in the ice box! Sugar stays moist and bread stays fresh longer. I call my bread box my "brown sugar box" now, and keep raisins in it to keep them fresh indefinitedly. If the sugar is already hard, sprinkle a few drops of water on the package before putting it in the bread box and it will soften overnight, and stay soft there. E. M., Camp Le Jeune, N. C.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you name a United States stamp specialist in the Washington area who might be able to identify a one-cent stamp 1851-57 issue as to type and value? Mrs. John H. Davis, RFD 2, Clarksburg, Md.

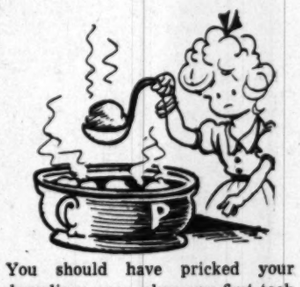
The Washington Post's own stamp specialist, William Stuart, advises us that this particular issue has quite a few varieties, and it would therefore be necessary for an appraiser to examine the stamp in order to evaluate it. Mr. Stuart himself will be glad to appraise it for you if you mail it to him, care of The Washington Post. Enclose a stamped, addressed envelope to ensure safe return.

DEAR ANNE:
I wonder if you know of anything to keep pieces of onion? I have tried a covered jar and putting it in the ice box, but it always gets soft and loses its smell. Mrs. H. E. M.

Having tried all these myself in vain, I've about given up on saving onion, once cut, for more than a day or so. Perhaps our readers have had better luck. You might find it helpful to keep a can of dehydrated onion on your spice shelf, to use as seasoning when only a small quantity of onion is indicated in a recipe. The powdered form keeps well indefinitely. So do onion flakes and onion salt.

PETUNIA!

I hoisted 'em out
And I busted 2 spoons—
My dumplings were heavy
As iron balloons.



You should have pricked your dumplings open when you first took them from the kettle, Petunia. That keeps them light.

International Smart Set Takes Up Seamless Hose

The seamless stocking—long a summer favorite of many American women, has suddenly become a fashion favorite with the international smart set.

I can't tell you how many really smart women in both Paris and London were wearing seamless stockings this winter. It was particularly noticeable in Paris, where one of the French dressmakers had all of the mannequins wear seamless stockings while showing his collection—stockings that he had brought back from an American visit.

And when, on the steamer coming home, I saw one of the smartest women in America, who has been on the "10 best-dressed" list for many years, wearing seamless stockings, too,

New-Voters Drive Planned In Maryland

A campaign to register every Marylander eligible to vote begins today throughout the State. Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., has proclaimed the week of June 12-19 as Maryland Registration Week.

All election officials have been asked by the Governor to make a special effort this week to register all eligibles. The Governor further called upon every citizen "to consider himself or herself a committee of one to urge relatives and friends, who are eligible, to register."

Governor Lane pointed out in his proclamation that "preservation of the American form of government depends upon the exercise of the right to vote."

To register, one must have been a resident of Maryland for one year at the time of the general election or must have become 21 years of age while living in the State.

County Efforts

Special efforts will be made in nearby Montgomery and Prince Georges counties to register new voters.

In Montgomery County registration boards will sit all week, including Saturday, from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m. and 6 p. m. to 10 p. m., at the National Guard Armory in Silver Spring and the County Building in Bethesda.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, a registration board will sit in the Takoma Park firehouse for the same hours. On Monday, Wednesday and Thursday the registrars will sit from 6 p. m. to 10 p. m. in the Flower Avenue Elementary School, Flower and Wayne aves. On Tuesday registration will be held from 7 p. m. to 10 p. m. in the Potomac Elementary School; on Wednesday, from 4 p. m. to 9 p. m., in Williams' store, Damascus, and on Friday, from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m. and 6 p. m. to 10 p. m., at the Kensington National Guard Armory.

In addition any person may go to the board of election supervisors office in Rockville during regular business hours each day except Saturday.

At Polling Places

In Prince Georges County a general registration day will be held at the regular polling places from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. and new voters also may register at the Courthouse in Upper Marlboro daily and at the County Service Building in Hyattsville from 6 p. m. to 9 p. m. on Tuesday and Friday nights. Other county-wide registration days will be held August 15, September 29 and October 3.

Members of the League of Women Voters in both counties will make a special effort to get their neighbors and friends to register and party workers of both the Republicans and Democrats will put on special efforts to register new voters.

Polling places at which Prince Georgeans may register Tuesday follow:

Vansville—Beltsville fire house.

One on the Aisle—

I've Been on More Laps Than a Napkin

By Richard L. Coe

NO ONE IN MOVIELAND is quite so dear to my heart as those cafe singers you find in the South Sea islands.

Shelley Winters is playing one in the Metropolitan's "South Sea Sinner" and Shelley's a treat even if the movie's not.

"I've been on more laps than a napkin," sighs Shelley. Her father, she explains, was a school teacher and both parents were killed by bandits, which, in movie terms, means that Shelley was left to fend for herself in a hard world, no friends, no relatives, just succulent Shelley vs. Life.

Looking like a late-teen version of Mae West and with voice enough to carry a chune, Shelley chants her way through the more disreputable joints and winds up on Oango, which leaves very few isles daring enough to receive her.

What makes these wanderers such as Shelley is playing so interesting is that they have never, ever, done anything wrong. Since Somerset Maughm wrote "Sadie Thompson," the movies have soaped the girls spotless, leaving only that startling veneer and generous wardrobe which must come as such a relief to those alighting from the invariable filthy tubs which ply those passionate seas.

All other females in the South Sea world are wilted types, with energy enough only to order a citron presse from some obsequious native. Their clothes are just the thing for afternoon tea at a Main Line manse, their voices are rafeeeened to the point of being mumbles and, while their manners are correct, there is venom in their eyes.

No so Shelley, as here, and the girls she resembles. They walk as if on springs, the siesta is not for them nor does midnight find them withered. Then they are to be seen delighting grimy males in some wreck of a saloon, here "The Port of Hope," putting over a song with a dazzle that would razzle the Copa. And while the owner of the bar and all the rats of the wharves may battle their way to the dressing room, Shelly and her sisters remain as the new fallen snow.

This is the important point of "South Sea Sinner," wherein MacDonald Carey is trying to clear himself of wartime rubber dealings with the Japs. In an effort to help Mac, Shelley tells the police that someone couldn't have murdered someone. "He was in my room," she says scornfully.

At this, despite deportation charges that have admittedly kept her on the go for years, police officials, residential business men and Our Mac are stunned into horrified silence. A greater bombshell, it seems, could not have been dropped by Louisa May Alcott.

It is this enviable innocence, then, which I find so irresistible in movies like "South Sea Sinner." The picture's plot (evidently a rehash from a yarn by those inexhaustable dreamers of Middle Europe, Ladislas Foder and Lazlo Vadney) weaves pokily along despite a few efforts to liven things up with saloon battles and there are also nice bits by Liberace, that pianist President Truman has applauded several times.

But Shelley, who sings "The Lonliest Gal in Town" and "Blue Lagoon," has a whimsical way of playing Sadie Thompson's descendant and with vacation time in the air, I long for the South Sea isles and their scandalous purity.

ALSO ON THE MET'S double feature bill is an item called "I Was a Shoplifter," which about gives the yarn away . . . Mona Freeman is the small fry shoplifter and Scott Brady is a detective on trail of a gang that's been playing hob with the department stores.

THE DRIVE-INS are sho-nuf after extra addeds this year . . . E. M. Loew's on the Richmond Highway has had a free pony ride and playground for the kids this year and now along comes Sidney Lust's Beltsville spot with a dance floor as part of your ticket fee . . . He suggests the light fantastic before showtime and during intermissions and has plans for contests on his new floor.

THERE'S a new phone number for the Cross Roads Theater seat reservations: EXecutive 5640 . . . The barn theater opens tomorrow night with "A Texas Steer" at 8:45 and you can get ABW buses from 12th and the avenue.

THE DUPONT and Little are moving up the opening day for "The Jackie Robinson Story," arriving tomorrow, and it looks as though the Palace will be bringing in "Anne Get Your Gun" a few days earlier than skedded.

PAULETTE GODDARD and what seems a pretty huge cast for a summer barn theater—30 in all—arrive tonight for final "Caesar and Cleopatra" rehearsals . . . The Shaw comedy opens Olney's summer season Friday night.

"SOUTH SEA SINNER," a Universal release, produced by Michel Kraike, directed by Bruce Humberstone, screenplay by Joel Malone and Oscar Brodney, from a story by Ladislas Fodor and Lazlo Vadnay. At the Metropolitan.

THE CAST

"Jake" Davis	MacDonald Carey
Coral	Shelley Winters
Margaret Landis	Helena Carter
Cognac	Luther Adler
Doc	Frank Lovejoy
Grayson	Art Smith
Williams	John Ridgely
Andrews	James Flavin
Key Williams	Molly Lamont
Lee	Silan Chen
Bartender	Henry Kulky
Captain	Fred Nurney
Lieutenant	Phil Nazir
Maestro	Liberace

BUT SHE'S NO SINNER: Shelley Winters has the title role in "South Sea Sinner," with MacDonald Carey, but she's a pretty fine gal in the Metropolitan's yarn, double-billed with "I Was a Shoplifter"

Reds Seize Jap Boats

Tokyo, June 11 (AP).—The newspaper Asahi said today 13 Japanese fishing boats were seized by Russian patrol boats Thursday off the east coast of Hakkaido, northernmost of Japan's main islands. The paper said six boats have been released.

Republicans Set Up County Platform

Prince Georges Republicans have adopted an eight-plank platform for the current election campaign in the county.

The GOP program, announced by John R. Fletcher, chairman of the county Republican State Central Committee, announced the platform. He said the planks embody many changes advocated by the League of Women Voters and civic associations.

The platform proposals include: survey of the county government by an independent agency not affiliated with any political party; a county manager, stricter enforcement of present gambling laws and additional laws if necessary, as well as an investigation to determine whether there has been any corruption in public office; more efficient and economical administration of school funds, repeal of the Sothoron Bill, a balanced growth of building development, opening of all business sessions of the county governing body to the public, encouragement of women to seek public office.

The statement declared the county is "known throughout the entire country as a haven for the gambling element" and "the recent conviction in Federal Court of a county public official, who may be a scapegoat, merely accentuates the situation."

The platform was drafted by a six-man committee including Oliver Metzerott, banker and former State Senator; Arthur C. Keefer, formerly a member of the Legislature; Mayor Merrill L. Harrison of Laurel; Gordon Louk of Bladensburg, president of the county Republican Club; John F. Lillard, jr., Hyattsville lawyer; Mrs. J. William Pike, Riverdale Heights, president of the county Federation of Republican Women's Clubs, and Fletcher as an ex-officio member.

Fletcher said the platform is purposeful brief, but that candidates will amplify each plank as campaign issues. The GOP is convinced, Fletcher said "the vast majority of our voters are completely dissatisfied with their present government, its outmoded procedures and notorious corruption among high officials.

The chairman said the Republicans will welcome debate with the Democratic opposition.

Cabinet Fall Predicted

Tehran, June 11 (AP).—Political informants predicted today that Iran's cabinet would fall or be reshuffled shortly. They speculated Gen. Ali Razmara, chief of the general staff, might succeed Premier Ali Mansoor.

Group Is Set Up To Guide States On Divorce Laws

New York, June 11 (AP).—Establishment of an interprofessional commission to study and produce model divorce legislation for submission to various states was announced today.

The 14-member body will hold its first meeting in New York beginning June 16, said the American Bar Association's special committee on divorce and marriage laws.

The commission, made up of leaders in law, religion, medicine, psychiatry, psychology, sociology and education, is to reexamine existing laws regulating marriage and divorce and legal procedure in divorce cases, with a view to producing improved legislation suitable for submission to the various state legislatures.

Music Clubs Federation Has Concert

By Paul Hume

Good intentions toward American music filled the Phillips Gallery yesterday afternoon.

The Washington Chapter of the Federation of Music Clubs arranged a program of music in varying forms, all by domestic composers.

The Page Quartet played through the generosity of the Musical Program Transcription Fund, Local 161, of the American Federation of Musicians. Claire Howard, Virginia Houghton, and Gordon Barnes, singers, added words to the day's music, and Margaret Tolson contributed the third piano sonata of Ross Lee Finney.

Miss Tolson and Finney provided the most satisfying moments of the afternoon. A finely proportioned reading of a handsome piece of contemporary piano writing outdistanced all other participants in the excellent project. The balance of the program was marked by technical shortcomings of everyone involved.

The Page Quartet has the spirit, but not the technical prowess to manage the music they essay. Randall Thompson's D Minor quartet has fine moments. It was seldom possible to enjoy them because of the tonal or intonational problems in playing.

Their support of Gordon Barnes in Samuel Barber's Dover Beach was equally disaffecting, and made it more difficult for him to project the subtle mood of Arnold's poem. Barnes found little difference in color or mood as he sang the dramatic lines. His vocal habits make his delivery uneven in tone and vowels.

He succeeded far better in two great songs of Charles Ives, so often neglected in recitals of American singing. Miss Howard has a handsome voice generally badly used, while Miss Houghton appeals to the ear only in soft passages. But Miss Houghton sang some of our best songs while Miss Howard was content with five similar, and weak, songs. Why not pick a composer's best, if he is to be represented only once in a group? Why always the same inferior samples?

Gulfport Closed As Longshoremen Join Truck Strike

Gulfport, Miss., June 11 (U.P.).—This cargo center hung out a "closed indefinitely" sign for ships today as some 300 longshoremen stayed off their jobs in sympathy with a truckers' strike.

The International Longshoremen's Associatoin local joined the crews of some 100 trucks in a walkout yesterday. The Port Commission ordered all incoming ships rerouted to other ports.

The Ryan Stevedoring Co., which handles loading and unloading and sublets the trucking operations to various other companies, hung out a sign saying: "Port Closed Indefinitely."

A number of incoming ships being rerouted were bringing in strategic materials from the Far East, port officials said. The port handled 30 ships last month.

Chevy Chase Man's Condition Satisfactory

Worcester, Mass., June 11 (AP).—The condition of John Tracy Mehr, 21, of Chevy Chase, Md., Holy Cross College senior who was injured in an automobile accident here Saturday, was reported satisfactory at City Hospital tonight.

Mehr, captain of the Holy Cross golf team and scheduled to be graduated Wednesday, was a passenger in a car driven by William L. Maher, 23, of Teaneck, N. J., a Holy Cross sophomore. The car hit a parked truck. Mehr suffered a concussion and severe cuts of the left ear.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT for the District of Columbia. In re: Condemnation for the acquisition of land for alley purposes in Square 2945 (vicinity of Georgia Avenue, Tuckerman Street and Tewkesbury Place) in the northwest section of the District of Columbia. District Court, No. 3244. Notice and order of publication. Notice is hereby given that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, pursuant to the provisions of Sections 1608 to 1610, inclusive, of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia, have filed a petition in this court praying for the condemnation of the land necessary for alley purposes in Square 2945, in the District of Columbia, as shown on a map or plat filed with the said petition as part thereof, and praying also that this court empanel a jury in accordance with the law provided for in such cases, to assess the damages each owner of land to be taken may sustain by reason of the condemnation of the land necessary for said alley purposes, and to assess benefits resulting therefrom, including the expenses of these proceedings, upon each lot or part of lot, or parcel of land, which will be benefited by said condemnation in the proportion that the said jury may find said lots, parts of lots, or parcels of land will be benefited as provided for, in and by the aforesaid Code of Law, and by the Act of Congress, approved June 20, 1939.

It is, by the Court, this 24th day of May, 1950, ordered: That all persons having any interest in these proceedings be, and they hereby are warned and commanded to appear in this Court on or before the 11th day of September, 1950, at 10 o'clock a. m., and continue in attendance until the Court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the award of damages and the assessment of benefits of the jury to be empaneled and sworn herein; and it is further ordered: That a copy of this notice and order be published twice a week for two successive weeks in the Washington Evening Star, The Washington Post and the Washington Times-Herald, newspapers published in the said District, commencing at least 10 days before the said 11th day of September, 1950. It is further ordered: That a copy of this notice and order be served by the United States Marshal, or his deputies, upon such of the owners of the fee of the land to be condemned herein as may be found by the said Marshal or his deputies within the District of Columbia, and upon the tenants and occupants of the same, before the said 28th day of August 1950. There's Something About this rambler that's different from the rest. Maybe its the size of the 3-master bedrooms, maybe its the arrangement of the two tiled baths, it may be the streamlined efficiency kitchen, complete with range, refrigerator, garbage disposall, Bendix washer and exhaust fan. Perhaps it's the gigantic basement with ½-bath and outlet. It could be the large amount of storage space in the attic. Any way you figure, it all adds up to the mostest on the market today.

To Live 'Happily Ever After'

Staying Married Takes Good Management

Falling in love is easy, if you're lucky enough to meet Miss (or Mr.) Right. Staying in love and living together "happily ever after" is less a question of luck than of good management.

"Managing" your love affairs before marriage and managing your marriage after the wedding is the subject of this six-part series of articles. They are condensed from the recent book, "Before You Marry," published by Association Press. The author has been a counselor on marriage and family life for more than twenty years. Since 1934 he has been professor of social science and religion at George Williams College, Chicago.

By Sylvanus M. Duvall

CHAPTER ONE

One reason for the failure of so many marriages is that too many young people take marriage for granted, like steam heat and hamburger stands. Marriage to them is just something you do, like wearing shoes, getting your hair cut, or brushing your teeth.

It does not seem to call for special training or understanding. Whatever knowledges and skills you may need you can pick up, just as you learned to walk, or get on and off the bus.

"Doin' what comes natcherly" seems to be enough.

Another reason for failure is the tendency to regard marriage as a guest does a party. At a party you may have to do a little work as a guest, like getting out the bridge tables and rolling back the rug.

But mainly it is an occasion for fun which requires little effort and no special effort or competence. And so people expect marriage to be like that! Isn't it swell?

After you marry you have social and sexual access to one you love, without having to worry about competition, or what the neighbors will say.

In addition to all this heaven, you will, according to the advertisements, have a gleaming modern kitchen. You will have a charming living room, ornamented later on by neatly dressed, attractive and well-behaved children.

This picture is not so much false as it is incomplete.

Marriage is lots of fun. But it is a "party" in which you are host as well as guest. Therefore it is work.

It can mean an endless round of dishes and diapers. It means bills, worries, and sometimes burdensome debts. If the relationship between husband and wife is to continue rich and worthful, and if their children are to be attractive, marriage means hard work and almost saintly forbearance.

People who come to a marriage as to a party, expecting loads of pleasure at little cost, are likely to feel cheated. If your marriage is to be a success, rather than a divorce statistic, you must put real effort into it. Yet effort alone is not enough.

You must know what to do, and what not to do, and have the skills necessary for success.

"Our Kind of Folks"

Seventy years ago, when Harry Allen and Susie Robinson decided to get married, they didn't have books to help them. They had no professional counsel to advise them.

Yet they and their geperation developed far more stable families than we do today, with all our books, counseling anad scientific knowledge. Why?

In the first place, they had a much better chance of marrying "our kind of folks." In Grandpa's day the area of selection for most young folks was about as far as Dobbin could travel and get back the same day—probably less than 10 miles.

Within this radius there were only about 20 available girls from whom Harry Allen could choose. Most of these were from his general background. The few who were not, he knew about.

Today a girl from Portland, Oreg., meets a boy from Portland, Me., while both are on vacations at Biloxi, Miss. Because so many of us now live in big cities, and because of greater possibilities for travel, the number of available mates a young person might meet runs into the hundreds.

Both Harry and Susie understood what marriage meant far better than most young people know what it means now.

When Susie said "Yes" to Harry, she had learned a lot from her mother. She could not only bake a pie, Billy Boy, but also tend a garden, raise chickens, make clothing, and manage a household.

She and Harry would never have dreamed of discussing sex. But both of them had been brought up on farms where animals were bred. In some ways they knew more about it than their less inhibited grandchildren.

They also knew each other and each other's families long before they were called upon to "know" each other in the Biblical sense.

Both their families had lived in the same town since they were born. There was little about any family which was not publicly understood.

Harry knew what the whole town knew, that Susie's Aunt Jane had run off with a man not her husband, and was now living somewhere in New York with her 12-year-old son, supported in part by Brother Joe, who was Susie's father.

Everybody knew that Harry's mother had "not been the same" since her youngest son died, and that Susie's father sometimes drank too much hard cider and was not reliable.

Demanded Less

Yes, our grandparents knew not only the persons they married but often the characters and even the emotions of their in-laws.

Finally and perhaps most important, they demanded far less of their marriages.

Husbands and wives no more thought of demanding glamour of each other, than a farmer of today would demand it of his tractor. They might appreciate beauty in each other, as in their animals and their land, but the function of them all was primarily to produce.

Harry Allen's grandson faces a far more difficult problem of mate selection. Within a 10-mile radius of Harry's home lived about 20 available girls.

The grandson lives in a big city, and within a 10-mile radius of his home are more than 20,000 marriageable girls.

Harry knew which of the girls were "his kind of folks."

His grandson finds it very difficult to know the background and the family of the girls he meets, and how they look at, think and feel about life.

Yet such knowledge of those we are about to marry is as important as it ever was.

Why is a similarity of social background so important?

On one point practically all studies of success in marriage agree.

The more similar their social background, the greater chance a couple will have for success, and the easier and happier will be their adjustments.

The problem can be likened, in some respects, to that of language. You might associate for a time with someone speaking another language just because you found it interesting, or because you wished to learn their language. But in permanent association the problem of adjustment will be much easier with your own group.

So it is with marriage. For this is a job which often puts those who work together at it under considerable pressure. The more they can speak the same language in the backgrounds and standards, the more satisfactory will be the relationship and the better job they will do.

Your own group may not be better than other groups, but it is usually better for you.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Boy Drops Studio Couch And Kills Baby Brother

Connellsville, Pa., June 11 (AP).—Nineteen - months - old Donald Vanorsdale was killed today when a 7-year-old brother dropped a studio couch on top of him, the coroner's office reported.

The older boy evidently lifted the leg of the couch, which then fell back on Donald.

The child died of a fractured skull.

'Dragnet'

Some Honest Cops In an Honest Show

By John Crosby

MORE or less on popular request, I'd like to say a few additional kind words about "Dragnet" (NBC-WRC, 10 p. m. Thursdays). It was revived here shortly after it opened but several members of the class at the rear of the room were shooting craps that day and missed the lesson. They have subsequently written in to accuse me of dereliction of duty in neglecting this fine show, an unfair charge.

Anyhow, "Dragnet" is the most honest of the detective programs—you can hardly call it a mystery program—anywhere on the air. Its cases are taken from the files of the Los Angeles Police Department and, except for the alteration of names, are presented pretty much as they originally happened.

Frankly, I think the producers might have selected a less chaotic police department than that of Lso Angeles, which is not exactly world famous for its brilliance. Still, police methods don't vary a great deal from city to city and this program affords the general public a pretty thorough study of just how a good cop operates.

Emphasis on Detection

HOW he operates, of course, is entirely different from how the cops operate in all the other crime shows on the air. The emphasis here is not on brilliant deduction; it is on painstaking detection, which is something else again. There isn't even much mystery. The pair of detectives, who work as a team on this show, generally know who their man is and so does the listener. The idea is to catch him, and—what is more important—to pin it on him. The legal angle of police work is almost completely neglected in all other crime shows I know of. Once the private eye nabs his suspect, the guy—or more often, the girl—confesses generally to a roomful of people in dinner clothes who are appalled to discover that the pretty little deQuincey girl could have been so indelicate as to strangle three men in half-an-hour

"Dragnet" is a very apt name for the sort of work Detective Sergeant Friday and his buddy do. Recently, they set out to exonerate—or to convict—a rookie cop accused of beating up and robbing a civilian. (Rookie cops and even veteran cops have been known to do such things.) The two detectives meticulously examined the rookie's background, almost from the day he was weaned, for evidence of prior defalcation.

Suspecting a frame-up, they also went after his accuser, discovered a great deal about his unhappy home life, his predatory habits with women and his gambling. They traced him step by step the night of the alleged robbery through a dozen saloons, discovered to the penny how much he had spent and gambled away that night, which happened to coincide almost exactly with the amount he claimed had been taken from him, and eventually broke him down, not by deduction, but by sheer accumulation of evidence.

ONE of the most authentic facets of this show is the number of times the two detectives fail to get anywhere. They follow a lead. They draw a blank. They try another. Another blank. So they try again. A cop's life, far from being a succession of triumphs, is more often a succession of frustrations. If one phone call fails to flush out any information, he tries 25 more or a hundred, and eventually—well, "Dragnet" is a good name for it.

Engineers at U. of Maryland Repair Damaged Wind Tunnel

The University of Maryland's $1,000,000 wind tunnel, put out of commission by a freak mishap last December, has been patched and is back in use.

Engineers have worked nearly 18 weeks at the delicate job of building, installing and testing a 14-foot, all-aluminum propeller, to replace the wooden one that was shattered during a test December 5.

The propeller acts as a giant fan, producing an air stream of extremely high velocity. Models of proposed or redesigned aircraft—scaled to tolerance of one-thousandth of an inch and costing anywhere from $19,000 to $500,000—are set up in the stream and observed under simulated flight conditions.

Why the wooden propeller disintegrated as it did has never been fully explained, the tunnel operator said. To forestall future trouble, however, blades on the new prop have been equipped with "strain gauges"—instruments that record exactly how much "pull" is being exerted while in motion.

Chipping and cracking of the surrounding walls are the only other damage, caused by the impact of the flying blades.

Repair costs amounted to less than $1400. This, according to A. W. Sherwood, engineer in charge of the tunnel, was made possible by using low-price war surplus materials, and by the fact all labor was done by the staff. On a contract basis, Sherwood estimated, the job would have run upward of $15,000.

The wind tunnel, which was completed late in 1948, is housed in a two-story brick structure at the north end of the campus at College Park. It is part of the new Glenn L. Martin Institute of Technology. Operation and maintenance is handled by a permant staff of 10.

Test work for the Naval Ordnance Laboratories at White Oak, Md., which was in progress before the shutdown, will be continued within a few days.

Geologist Is Killed As Oil Well Blows Out

Big Spring, Tex., June 11 (AP).—An oil well near here blew out last night and erupted into spectacular flame that burned a geologist to death.

Flames 600 feet high still spouted from the well today, and huge columns of greasy, black smoke boiled into the sky.

Jack Morris Bristow, 26, of Monahans burned like a torch when gas shooting from the well ignited about him.

Howard Gets One Extra Listener on His Day Off

Tony Howard, WPIK disc-jockey, has a son named David who is just over 2 years old.

David has been listening to his old man's air work long enough to recognize the Howard voice and style.

The other day Tony recorded his show in advance, and took a day off for loafing about the house.

The radio was on, and pretty soon here came the recorded Tony Howard show. David cocked his head quizzically at the radio, looked at Tony to reassure himself that Daddy was still in the room, and in profound confusion piped:

"Is that Daddy, too?"

SOME JUMP, EH?

That Fisher Feller, who thinks Pop Grey is this column's second-best poet, sometimes, doesn't even bother with prose in conducting a conversation.

When I complained that our Give-Aways were so numerous that they were taking up too much room, that Fisher Feller looked glumly out the window at Saturday's rainstorm and mused:

I'm a son-of-a-gun . . . If I've seen that old sun . . . More than six times since April was ended . . . For it simply has rained . . . And it's rained and it's rained . . . For a time that's been too long extended.

It's a good thing it doesn't . . . Really rain cats and dogs . . . With them falling to earth in such volume . . . Or you'd have such a maze . . . Of those pet Give-Aways . . . That they'd fill up your whole dog-gone column.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three fine kittens, 6 weeks old, but already good mousers." (Overlook 2193.)

"Two-month-old terrier pup; toy collie pup; 2-year-old watch-dog, mostly cocker." (Chestnut 6692.)

"Black mother cat and gray kitten." (Warfield 1458.)

"Housebroken, self-assured 7-week-old kitten." (Randolph 8088 after 6 p. m.)

"Four adorable kittens." (Hobart 7543.)

"Two female watchdogs, 6 months old, mixture collie and shepherd." (Lawrence 6-6965.)

"Mother cat and gray kitten." (Union 1404.)

"Two 8-week-old kittens." (Falls Church 7613.)

"Buster and Filibuster, identical 7-week-old black male puppies, mostly cocker and terrier; will deliver." (Ashton 5533.)

THIS IS WASHINGTON

Mrs. Herbert Elliston of 1642 29th st. nw. had a lot of shopping to do the other day, but most important thing on her list was a very special present for a special occasion.

Mrs. Elliston's cab driver waited for her as she stopped at various stores and shops, and then drove her on to the next.

At the last store, Mrs. Elliston dismissed her driver—only to discover that the very special present she'd spent so much time and effort finding was now inexplicably missing.

She retraced her steps, to no avail. It was just plain gone—and so was the day. There was nothing to do but admit defeat and return home.

"There's a package for you, Mrs. Elliston," the maid greeted her when she arrived. "A cab driver brought it, and said you'd know what it was."

You guessed it. The honest hacker had looked at the sales slip tucked in the package and identified the owner. But he failed to identify himself—and a grateful Mrs. Elliston would like him to know how much she appreciates his neighborliness.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

If you're really as ugly as you picture yourself in some of your latest cartoons, I don't blame your wife for not speaking to you.

Personally, I like good-looking men. To look at, that is. From a distance only. Unsigned.

Dear Careful:

The letters "COAK" which appear on all my cartoons are an abbreviation for LeBaron Coakley, a pseudonym I sometimes use to confuse my friends.

I slip on a pair of horn-rimmed glasses, grow 3 inches in height, whiten my hair, and you'd never know me. That way I get away with having two wives and two families, and nobody has ever guessed my secret except you.

Incidentally, if you like to look at handsome men from a distance, let me recommend the bleacher seats at Griffith Stadium any night that Eddie Yost is playing third base.

If that's still too close, try those same seats when the team is on the road.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Legislator Named in 'Kickback'

By Drew Pearson

Congressman John S. Wood of Canton, Ga., is a scholarly, dignified gentleman who looks the way you expect a Congressman to look.

However, irrefutable evidence is at hand that Mr. Wood has been acting the way a Congressman should not act—in brief, taking money from the folks in his district for getting a bill passed through Congress.

Wood

Here are the regrettable facts in the case:

On January 23, 1944, Ralph Stanfield of Tate, Ga., a resident of the Congressman's district, was struck by a United States Army truck, and seriously injured. As a result, he was entitled to damages from the truck-owner—namely, the United States Government; and Congressman Wood introduced a bill authorizing $10,000 compensation.

While the bill was pending, the Stanfield family got its first intimation that Congressman Wood's office expected to be paid for performing this service.

It is, of course, the job of every Congressman to introduce bills in which his constituents are interested. He is paid a regular salary by the United States Treasury for this, and it is against the law for him to accept outside fees. In fact such fees, if they go into his pocket, are a penitentiary offense.

However, the Congressman's then secretary, Charles Holcomb, according to a statement by Mack Stanfield, father of the injured boy, suggested that part of the $10,000 should be paid back to Congressman Wood. But the bill hadn't passed at that time, and the point was not pressed.

Unique Law Partner

Following passage of the bill, however, Carl Tallant, the Congressman't law partner, suggested that it was "customary" to pay 10 percent of compensation bills of this kind. Tallant was not only a partner in the firm of Wood and Tallant, but was also on the congressional payroll and worked in Wood's office in Washington. This, in itself, is an unusual arrangemen, since Tallant not only draws $7022 from the Government to work for Wood, but also handles law cases from the vantage point of the Congressman's office.

Thus Tallant, both as law partner and employe, was in a position to speak for the Congressman. And when he made out a check for $1000, Mack Stanfield, father of the crippled boy, signed it.

I have in my possession a photostat copy of that check, dated September 13, 1947, on the Bank of Canton, Georgia. I also have a photostat of a check dated the same day, made out to Cokers Hospital, for $3300. In other words, when young Stanfield got the $10,000 compensation from the Government, he immediately paid the bills incurred by his illness, and simultaneously was persuaded to pay an unjust fee to Congressman Wood's law partner and congressional employe.

It is significant that after the check was passed, Congressman Wood apparently got worried. For the elder Stanfield says that the Congressman asked him to keep the matter quiet. Of course, if the Congressman thought anything was wrong he could have returned the check. But he didn't.

Russell Is Different

Also significant is the fact that 10 days ago when the Congressman heard I was interested in this payoff, he sent a friend of the Stanfields around and asked to borrow the canceled check, promising to return it. It has not been returned, however, and probably won't be. What the Congressman did not know was that I had obtained notarized photostats of the telltale check before he borrowed it.

In contrast to the $1000 paid Congressman Wood's office for helping a crippled boy, was the fact that Senator Russell got similar relief for another Georgian who was hurt by the same United States Army truck. But Senator Russell, like 99 percent of the other members of Congress, performed this service—as he was supposed to do—merely as part of his routine job of being a Senator.

The second man hit by the truck was Herman Philyaw, also of Tate, Ga., who was standing alongside young Stanfield when the Army truck came round a sharp turn, out of control, and crashed into them. Stanfield's leg was smashed and Philyaw broke his wrist. Senator Russell promptly got a bill passed paying damages to Philyaw, but charged him no fee. Congressman Wood got a similar bill passed for Stanfield, for which his office collected $1000.

Oregon Smear Campaign

During his rough primary fight, Morse was accused of being "soft on Communism" and a pro-fellow traveler.

But two days before the election, Morse turned the tide by taking newspaper ads in which he offered to answer any and all questions during an hour on the radio before an audience.

Morse's opposition sent in "smear questions," which brought the issue out in the open, and gave him a chance to answer. He is certain that radio-quiz hour won his decisive renomination.

70th Year Helping Build Greater Washington
Colonial Village, D.C.
. . . Section of Washington in the District's Northernmost Corner, lying eastward of East Beach Drive and north of Kalmia Road along Rock Creek Park.
Colonial Village is a modern reproduction of early Americana. Its central "commons", flagged walks, and stone walls are reminiscent of Revolutionary Days, as is the traditional architecture of its homes. No artistic effort has been spared to create a time-mellowed atmosphere.
In helping develop many gracious residential sections, Washington Permanent is a tradition of over 69 years standing. Under its financing plans for the buying or building of new homes, refinancing old mortgages, remodeling and repairing, one monthly payment covers everything . . . loan principal, interest, taxes, insurance.

Barnard College Fund Drive Draws Alumnae . . . and Compliments for Hecht Co. Fashions . . .

B.A. degrees formed a learned background for beautiful fashions when many of Washington's 230 alumnae of Barnard College met to map a program to meet the advancing needs of this great educational institution, and to discuss fund-drives to aid the extension of Barnard's development. After the meeting the popular Virginia Baker won plaudits for her Hecht Co. ensembles. Like so many on-the-go Washingtonians, Miss Baker always looks to the Fashion Floor of this great store in the Nation's Capital for flattering costumes for important social events.

Leaving the meeting of the Barnard College Development Fund Drive and pausing in the gateway of Mrs. Eugene Meyer's residence are (left to right): Mrs. Charles E. Clift, Jr., President, Barnard Alumnae Club of Washington; Virginia Baker (Mrs. F. M. Rogers), wearing The Hecht Co.'s organdy redingote dress at 17.95; and Mrs. Preston W. Grant, Team Captain, District of Columbia.

Barnard College Development Fund Drive, Washington Area Committee, adjourns on the grounds of Mrs. Eugene Meyer's residence. Left to right: Mrs. Alton Meister, Chairman, Bethesda-Chevy Chase Area; Mrs. Alice C. Cardozo, Team Captain, Arlington-Fairfax Area and Virginia Baker (Mrs. F. M. Rogers).
